Inconsistency seems to be the problem with Victoria Cougars, who dropped an 8-2 decision to Kamloops Chiefs Sunday in Western Canada Junior Hockey League action. The loss came on the heels of a 6-2 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings Saturday and coach Pat Ginnell benched his high-scoring line of Jim Gustafson, Danny Lucas and Jeff McDill after the first period in Kamloops. The line accounted for four of Saturday's goals but lacked cohesion with the defence Sunday. Page 10.

Dave Cutler, a Victoria resident, kicked his way into the Canadian Football League record books by booting four field goals for Edmonton Eskimos as the regular schedule ended. That gave Cutler 40 for the season, a new high, and wiped out B.C. Lions' playoff hopes. Page 9.

Victoria Scorpions staged a remarkable comeback victory Saturday against North Shore Mountaineers in Dogwood Senior "A" men's basketball action, scoring 46 points in the fourth quarter for a 136-123 triumph. But Sunday, defensive lapses proved costly as Victoria lost. Page 10.

University of Victoria Vikings won their first Canada West University Athletic Association soccer championship in Edmonton, wrapping up the title with a 4-0 victory over Saskatchewan Huskies. QUEEN PUSHES BUTTON

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Queen Elizabeth pressed a small golden button today and sent oil gushing ashore by pipeline from a field under the North Sea, 110 miles off shore.

It was a symbolic opening—the field has been in operation for a month — but it marked what Britons hope will be the beginning of the end of their economic doldrums.

Strict security precautions were in force to protect not only the Queen but the valuable oil.

Some Scottish nationalists, and in particular a beakaway group of militants known as the Tartan Army, have claimed the oil from the rich fields off Scotland's coast as belonging to Scotland alone, and in the last two years there have been four minor explosions at pumping stations along the 127-mile pipeline from the shore to he Grangemouth refinery.

Ottawa Forcing Extra $750M Into Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — A government plan to lever $750 million more out of private lenders next year to finance low - and - moderately - priced housing was announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

The minister also told the Commons that the government will open the subsidized home ownership program to more Canadians and change some grants to loans under the home ownership plan.

New grants will be offered to induce municipalities to approve more housing projects for low-and moderate-income families, he said. In addition, there would be an increase in interest-reducing payments to builders who were willing to put up rental units with rents fixed in agreement with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

And the government will establish by next spring the long-promised Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. (FMEC), which is to buy and sell mortgages, the minister said.

The housing measures outlined were promised by the cabinet following the recently announced anti-inflation program.

The government's target in residential construction is one million starts in the next four years, beginning with 235,000 units in 1976, Danson said.

Danson also said today the federal government will seek consistency in rent control rules across the country.

Commenting as he entered a federal-provincial housing conference, he said the federal government has asked the provinces to implement rent controls to fit in with the federal anti-inflation program.

But the government expects there will be sufficient flexibility to deal with specific local conditions, Danson said.

The minister also said he will outline to the provincial ministers the housing proposals he will be announcing to

Bangladesh Shooting Breaks Out

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — Hostilities between army troops for and against the new military-backed Bangladesh government exploded today into an exchange of gunfire in Dacca, diplomatic sources here report.

Japanese sources said shooting broke out in an army barracks early in the day but made no mention of casualties.

After the fighting, troops were patrolling the streets of Dacca and all traffic was halted except for cars of government officials and diplomats.

INFLATION ISSUE—BARRETT

B.C. Vote Dec. 11

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett announced the election at 2 p.m. today, saying he needs a mandate for his leadership in the national fight against inflation.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the federal anti-inflation program will continue for at least three years and Barrett said today he is determined to make that three-year fight successful.

"But for the next three years, I can only make it work if I have the necessary support to fight to make it fair, with equal sacrifices for all and favors to none," he said at a crowded press conference.

The premier said his government has already taken strong steps in the last few weeks to help in the fight against inflation, but he said more policies will be announced to toughen the anti-inflation program in the next few weeks.

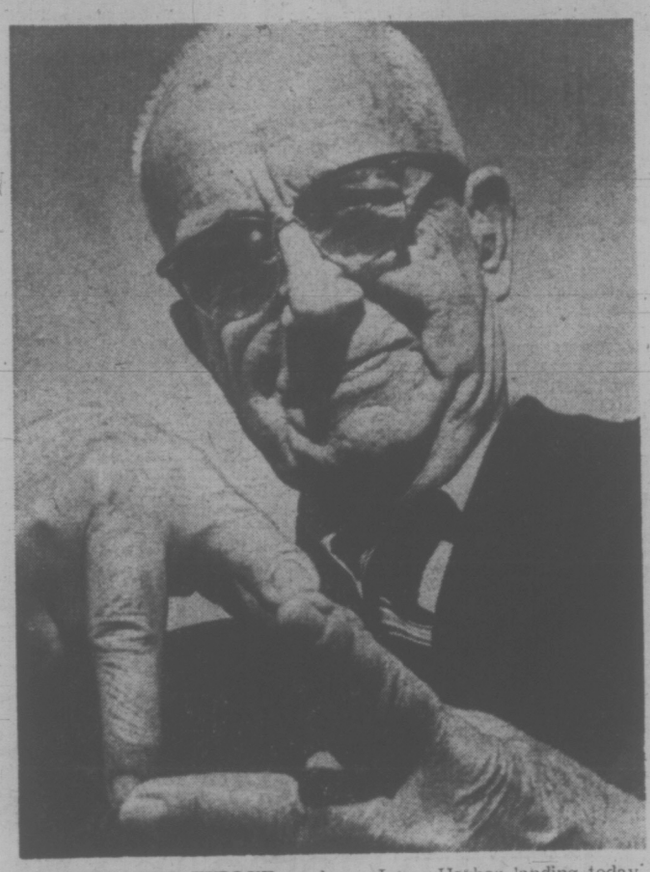
In its three years in government, the NDP has given good government, Barrett said. "However, this is just a beginning. There is still a long road to go and that's why I need the firm support of all of you.

"I need to know if I have your will and your support to carry out this task."

The final decision to call the election was made at his home Sunday, said Barrett.

The premier said he had been giving it much thought since returning from the federal-provincial anti-inflation talks three weeks ago.

Standings in the house give the NDP a majority with 38 seats; the Social Credit Party 14 seats; the Liberals two and the Tories one. At the last election, Aug. 30, 1972, the Socreds had 10 MLAs but have since gained three Liberals and one Tory.



BUCKMINSTER FULLER made an Inner Harbor landing today and eagerly went off on a sightseeing trip of Victoria including Butchart's Gardens. Ford Fires 2 Top Men

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders today said President Ford had told them he has fired Defence Secretary James Schlesinger and CIA director William Colby. Sources also said Henry Kissinger had given up one of his jobs—head of the National Security Council.

In an apparently unrelated incident—but one that added to the largest shake-up in the U.S. administration since the Watergate - related "Saturday Night Massacre" two years ago — Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller withdrew his name from consideration as Ford's running-mate in 1976.

An informed source at the White House who did not want to be identified said there was "much more to come."

NBC-TV reported today that both Schlesinger and Colby had confirmed their dismissals. Ford called a news conference for 4:30 Victoria time this afternoon, presumably to address the situation.

House Speaker Carl Albert said Ford told him Schlesinger would be replaced by Donald Rumsfeld, current White House Chief of Staff, and Colby would be replaced by George Bush, U.S. representative to China.

Albert said Ford telephoned him to say, "I wanted you to know first hand that Secretary Schlesinger will be replaced and so will Mr. Colby."

Albert said Ford did not mention the Kissinger change but that a presidential meeting with congressional leaders was scheduled later today.

The informed source said the so-called transition group which helped Ford during the early days of his presidency was the "architect" of the shake-up rather than Kissinger, as some observers believe.

ROCKY
. . . won't run

Former defence secretary Melvin Laird is a prime mover in the group which still keeps in close touch with Ford; so is William Scranton, former governor of Pennsylvania.

Another member of the group is Rumsfeld.

No reason was given for the dismissals but sources speculated that it grew out of a difference of opinion between Schlesinger, who favored a strong defence and a tougher stand against Moscow; and Ford and Kissinger, proponents of detente.

Colby had been expected to leave early next year because of recent criticism of the CIA.

Rockefeller's letter to Ford apparently had no relation to the reports of the national security changes. The vice president said he would complete his term.

"After much thought I have decided I do not wish my name to enter into your consideration for the upcoming Republican nomination," Rockefeller, 67, told Ford.

He pledged full co-operation with the administration and said he would "assist in every way I can in carrying on to cope with the problems that confront the nation."

Long, Cold Winter

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — The six inside postal workers in this northwestern Manitoba community returned to work today because, said one worker, they are finding it hard to get along financially.

"We couldn't go any longer without a pay cheque," said one of the female workers.

"It costs a lot of money to live up in this country and it's a long, cold winter."

Russell Jones, local president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said a few of the employees also were concerned about their pensions.

"We're just putting in time but at least we're getting paid," he said.

Jones said the fact the town is small enough for everyone to know the post office personnel added to the strikers' problems.

"You can't event walk down the street without getting a blast. We hate to see all these people not being able to send their parcels. We know everyone here."

He said he doesn't expect any adverse reaction despite the fact the mining community is a strong union town.

CUPW Predicts Week-Long Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks aimed at resolving the national postal strike could continue to the end of the week, chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said today.

Parrot made the remark as he entered talks with post office negotiators aimed at settling the strike which now is in its third week.

The two sides are far apart on the issue of casual labor and salaries, he said.

The next move in the national postal strike must come from the the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Sunday night.

In an interview Mackasey said that the government's last wage offer is clear cut.

"I have no intention of going back to cabinet to ask for a higher monetary package," he said.

The negotiations have yet to clear the major hurdles of non-union casual employees, electronic surveillance and wages.

Mackasey said Saturday the post office cannot operate without casual labor, especially in peak periods such as Christmas.

The union has asked for a wage increase of $2.73 an hour, or 51 per cent, over 27 months. Ottawa's offer is for an increase of $1.70 an hour, or 38 per cent, over 30 months.

The 22,000 workers now average $4.56 an hour.

Joe Davidson, president of the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Sunday the rank and file have been overwhelming in their support of their negotiating team. Davidson spent most of last week touring union locals in Western Canada.

Meanwhile, Marcel Perreault, head of the Montreal CUPW local, and Parrot addressed about 300 union members in Montreal Sunday.

"There hasn't been a single telegram or telephone call to the bargaining team telling us to go quicker and get the strike over with. This is unprecedented," Perreault said.

"We know we will have to compromise," he said.

Nuclear Waste Problem Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. estimates that there will be 115 nuclear reactors in Canada within 25 years, most owned and operated by provincial power utilities.

In the next 15 years, $212 billion will be spent on nuclear energy. By 1990, the expenditure for each family will have doubled to $2,400 a year.

By the end of the century, 100 tons of nuclear waste will have accumulated. Highly dangerous, it will have to be stored for thousands of years.

Radioactive material such as plutonium — 15 pounds of which can produce a home-built bomb — will be carried about the country in increasing amounts, by truck, rail, air and ship.

AECL has just started a "long-term development program" based on fuelling reactors with plutonium should a future shortage of uranium require this. The use of thorium fuel also is being looked into.

At present, Ontario Hydro plans a $1.5-billion nuclear station on Lake Ontario that would produce 4.4 million horsepower of electric power.

Yet nuclear reactors are still such a question mark that despite years of negotiation, the federal government has been unable to get private companies to insure them.

Official estimates say the worst possible accident in a reactor would cost tens of thousands of lives and do billions of dollars in damages.

But the concern of the insurance companies is more subtle. It revolves around the unknown effects of low-level radiation emissions not only on nuclear plant workers but on surrounding populations. Homeowner and automobile insurance policies already exempt companies from liability for nuclear damage.

So-called safe expsoure levels to radiation have been lowered steadily in the last 30 years. But as low as the "safe" levels are now, there is still concern about the damage such emissions may be causing.

These are some of the reasons a group of 45 associations, known as the Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, have proclaimed "nuclear responsibility week" beginning Tuesday.

One convert to the coalition is Ian Connerty, 28, who as research assistant to Lloyd Francis (L-Ottawa West) for the last eight months has drafted dozens of questions about the nuclear industry in Canada.

Like questions asked by Maurice Foster (L-Algoma) and Allan Lawrence (PC-Northumberland-Durham), they tend to reflect the ignorance of even MPs about the 30-year-old industry.

PEANUTS JUBILEE

Peanuts, the greatest success story in the history of comic strips, is 25 years old.

Charles Schulz, creator of Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Lucy, Linus and the rest of the Peanuts' gang, tells how the strip was created and developed in a five-part series beginning in the Victoria Times today on Page 34.

Because of the postal strike a number of other favorite comics are missing for this week, but they'll be resumed when alternative delivery methods take effect.

Labor Group Hits Gov't Curbs

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The founding convention of the British Columbia council of the Confederation of Canadian Unions agreed Sunday that Federal wage and price controls are "greedy, one-sided legislation."

About 50 delegates also agreed to oppose the B.C. government Collective Bargaining Continuation Act, which ordered work to resume in four sectors of the economy.

Delegates also urged the B.C. government to use price interest and rent controls to redistribute wealth.

Delegates represented seven unions in B.C. and the Yukon.

Kent Rowley, CCU national secretary-treasurer; said the theme of the meeting was to educate people to the Canadian labor movement.

"The Canadian labor movement is dominated by U.S. unions and because of that it is in a sad state of affairs," he said.

Rowley told a news conference the B.C. council of the CCU will coordinate activities for member unions which represent about 14,000 workers in the province and the territory.

He said the CCU has expansion plans in B.C., but would not elaborate.

Delegates also decided to establish a committee to draft resolutions on the B.C. Labor Act. The committee will seek a meeting with the government next month.

The group also wants one member on the government's labor education committee, said Rowley.

TWO KEY ISSUES FACE UNIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal price and wage controls and the provincial government's back-to-work legislation are expected to be two of the main issues discussed at key labor union convehtions this week.

Across the street at the Devonshire Hotel, delegates from the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada will hold their annual convention starting Tuesday. The union, one of those legislated back to work by the Barrett government's Bill 146, does not belong to the federation.

PPWC delegates will also be choosing a new union executive. National president Reg Ginn and vice-president Stan Shewaga, of the union's Nanaimo local, said Friday they have not decided if they would seek another term.

Tough Fight Warning For Socreds

Wallace Prepared

Canadian Press

Dr. Scott Wallace, leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Party and its lone MLA, said Saturday he is more than ready for the provincial election next year.

Wallace, who has recently completed a provincial tour, told a group of Conservatives meeting at his Oak Bay home that "anyone who takes me on should be warned I'm loaded for bear, mainly Social Credit Bear."

He was referring to a recent suggestion by a Social Credit spokesman that Wallace would lose his Oak Bay seat to a Socred candidate.

He said if it came to a choice between the NDP and Social Credit, "you can be damned sure that somewhere down the line you'll get the NDP again."

CAOUETTE QUITTING

OTTAWA (CP) — Citing health reasons, Social Credit Leader Real Caouette announced he will step down as leader of his party at a weekend meeting of the party's national council.

The council, at its biennial convention, decided Sunday that a leadership convention will take place in Ottawa in the fall of 1976. Caouette will remain as leader until that time.

The 58-year-old leader, who has been a diabetic for some time, says that his health in recent months has been improving but he does not have the vitality to fight another national election campaign.

He will remain MP for the northwestern Quebec riding of Temiscamingue.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Hyndman, newly-elected president of the Social Credit Party of British Columbia, says party leader Bill Bennett faces a tough attack as the province prepares for an election expected next year.

"I predict the toughest campaign, against Bill Bennett that ever faced a Canadian political leader," Hyndman said at the banquet that closed the party's annual two-day convention, attended by 1,765 registered delegates and visitors.

Hyndman, who as a twice-defeated Progressive Conservative provincial candidate and member of a long-standing Tory family symbolizes what party officials call the "unity party," said Premier Barrett can face the challenge of Social Credit by attacking the party or its leader.

"If he's successful in either one, he has a reasonable chance of surviving," Hyndman told the delegates.

He told them Bennett would need their full loyalty and support.

Robert Bonner, attorney-general in W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit government, defeated in 1972 by the NDP, said resolutions dealt with by delegates reflected their concern for senior citizens and housing problems.

Bonner, chairman of the resolutions committee, said a variety of resolutions were passed calling for expenditures on senior citizens' programs despite calls from Bill Bennett and his father, W. A. C., to keep governing spending down.

Bonner said delegates defeated other resolutions that would have called on a Social Credit government to spend money on new programs.

The resolutions made no wild promises and that the delegates advanced sane, sensible solutions to problems facing the province while calling for fiscal responsibility, he added.

Ken Kiernan, retiring vice-president and treasurer, told the delegates the party had $285,200 in the treasury as of Aug. 31. It spent $354,000 in the last fiscal year, $96,000 on advertising, $50,000 on headquarters staff and another $39,000 for summer students at party offices in the province.

the Commons later today. He did not elaborate.

John Rhodes, Ontario housing minister, said he could make no commitments before the conference on whether to go along with the federal rent control recommendations.

Believing that rent controls would deter rental construction, the province wanted to hear what incentives Ottawa had to stimulate production.

Yurko said that the capital cost allowance tax measure, which is to expire Dec. 30, should be extended for at least five more years to encourage rental building.

The allowance is a tax measure which enables lawyers and doctors to offset against other income a portion of the cost of borrowing capital to build rental units.

Barrett Was Right

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, told a labor audience Sunday that he cannot criticize Premier Barrett's government for its recent decision to order four major unions in British Columbia back to work.

"If the public interest is in danger or if the economy is grinding to a halt, I guess even a democratic, socialist premier has no alternative but to do what Barrett did," he told a meeting of the political education committee of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

Lewis said he does not like to see governments use their powers to order striking workers back to their jobs.

"But if you have no alternative, what the hell do you do?"

Radiation Forces Family from Home

DELORO, Ont. (CP) — Ted Galloway of Deloro says he and his family have been ordered to leave his home because of the danger of atomic radiation.

Mr. Galloway said representatives of the Ontario health ministry and officials of the Atomic Energy Control Board delivered a letter to him Friday ordering his family to leave their home within two weeks.

The letter said health inspectors had "found a condition that is dangerous or likely to become dangerous to health and safety because of the high concentration of radioactive material in the air within the household."

The letter, signed by Dr. J. H. Aitken, an inspector of the ministry of health, said the house will be closed "until the present condition is no longer exhibited."

Mr. Galloway, who says he has developed lung cancer, said he is relieved to be moving his family. He lives in the house with his wife and one of their five children.

He said the ministry will pay for the expenses of moving and acquiring a new residence. He said he is looking for a house in the area.

Dr. Aitken said in an interview today that the radiation problem involves slag piles at an abandoned mine near the Galloway home. The mine was owned by a mining and smelting company.

Silver and cobalt were processed on the site from the 1800s to 1961 when the operation was closed, leaving tons of slag in the area.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Saturday that wastes from a nuclear-generating station at Port Hope had been deposited in fields in the Deloro area, about 25 miles north of Belleville.

Man Jumps From Ferry

Searchers are looking for the body of a man who jumped from the B.C. ferry Queen of Surrey on her run from Departure Bay to Horseshoe Bay Sunday evening.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said a witness who talked to the man shortly before he jumped described him as being a native Indian between 30 and 40 years of age, weighing 170 pounds and being 5'4" in height.

The spokesmen said the witness tried to throw a lifering to the man and informed the magazine sales clerk.

By the time the captian was informed, however, the ship had docked. The incident happened about 7:50 p.m.

The coast guard cutters Racer and Mallard carried out an unsuccessful search for the body.

The present weather pattern will persist through Tuesday. Thus occasional rain will continue along the coast. Showers will accompany the Pacific disturbances as they cross the Interior.

After spending 68 years becoming one of Europe's great cars, Lancia comes to Canada. Unknown.

Lancia has finally come to Canada. With a car that's bound to make it famous in no time: the Lancia Beta.

The Beta is a highly refined touring car. It's finished to a level you simply don't see on mass-produced vehicles. And in performance, it's nothing short of extraordinary.

But for all its enormous speed and exceptional handling, it doesn't demand much more from you than the car you now own.

The Beta comes in a Coupe and a 4-door Saloon. And both cost far less than you'd ever expect to pay for cars of this type.

Which means they certainly won't be unknown long.

VIC PRESS TENTATIVE AGREEMENT

Tentative contract agreement was reached Saturday between Victoria Press Ltd. and the Joint Council of Unions representing Victoria Press employees.

Details of the agreement, designed to ensure continued publication of both the Victoria Times and the Daily Colonist, were not to be made public until ratification by the union membership and the board of directors of FP Publications Ltd., parent company of Victoria Press.

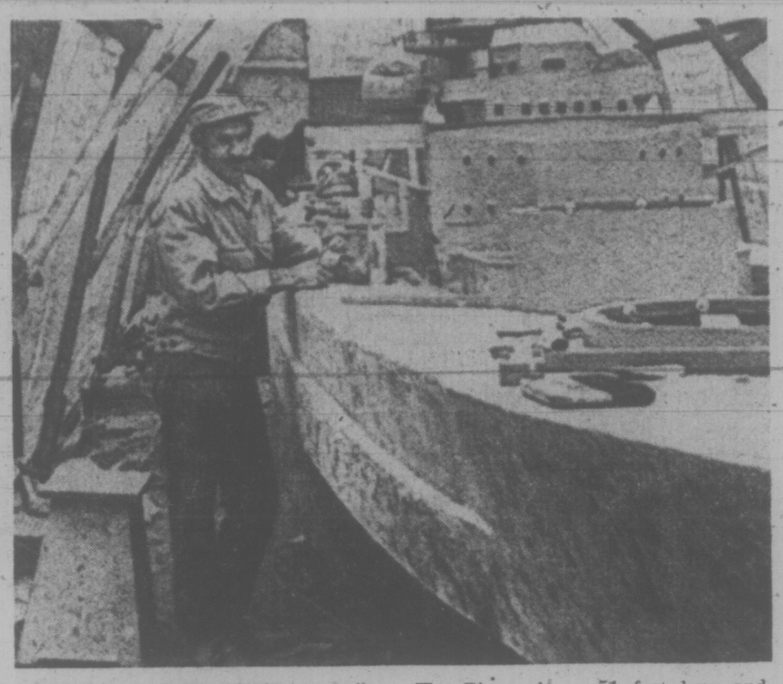
WCB Strike Vote

A strike vote being taken today among employees of The Workers Compensation Board in B.C. will be tabulated on a province-wide basis, not according to local units.

Victoria Shop steward Malcolm Watson said the result will be known Thursday.

Mediation proceedings in the dispute between some 1,000 WCB employees and the provincial government were continuing, but the vote was being taken because negotiations have been unproductive in meetings since June.

Employees include supervisors, inspectors, rehabilitation consultants, therapists and clerical occupations, of which about 35 are employed in the Victoria area.



BACKYARD BATTLESHIP was built by Paul Gresser of Sharon, Ont., who applies finishing touches prior to weekend launching in Lake Simcoe. The Bismarck — 51 feet long and weighing 5.5 tons — was built on a scale of 1:20 and will be powered by a 12 h.p. outboard motor.

Coroner's Jury Requests Probe of Arctic Air Crash

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — More than a year after 32 men went to their deaths in the worst aviation disaster in the history of the Canadian Arctic, the federal government was officially asked during the weekend to find out why.

An inquest which began in April ended Saturday night when a five-man coroner's jury recommended a federal inquiry into the crash Oct. 30, 1974, 2½ miles short of a landing strip at Rea Point, on Melville Island.

The inquest, directed by Coroner Walter England of Yellowknife, was frustrated by the refusal of the two survivors and other witnesses to testify.

England can compel testimony only from witnesses within the northwest Territories. One of the jury's 14 recommendations was that the powers of the coroner be broadened to enable him to subpoena witnesses from anywhere in Canada.

The jury established that the plane's approach was normal up to 20 seconds before the crash, although the pilot was unaware of severe weather conditions on the ground. At that point the plane began its decent to 300 feet. During the last five seconds descended at about 3,000 feet per minute to impact.

"The resulting deterioration of the aircraft flight profile at that stage could only be substantiated by the appearance and subsequent testimony of the two surviving crew members, Dave Hatton (co-pilot) and Gary Weyman (flight engineer), at the coroner's inquest," Willy Laserich of Yellowknife, jury foreman, told the hearing.

"As noted, without the testimony of the two survivors and other key witnesses to clarify existing discrepancies we cannot come to a firm and more comprehensive verdict," he said.

"We therefore strongly recommend a public inquiry into the events immediately preceding and following the crash . . ."

Justice Minister Ron Basford announced Sunday in Ottawa he will have no comment on the recommendation until today. Charles Heatherington, president of Panarctic, said he wanted to consider the recommendations before commenting.

Among the jury's recommendations were a call for voice and data recorders on larger aircraft. The jury was told the voice recorder of the Electra wasn't working while the data recorder was improperly connected.

The jury also wanted emergency facilities provided at Resolute Bay or another location, emergency equipment and radio guiding devices for incoming planes at Rea Point and an increase in medical staff at Rea Point.

Procedures and priorities for personnel at the Panarctic landing strip should be laid out and the radio operator should be licensed, said the report.

It added that flights in the Arctic should be scheduled in "normal working hours"—fatigue was considered a possible contributing factor to the crash—and metal-to-metal seat belts, rather than web-bing-to-metal ones, should be installed for passengers. The flight crew should wear available shoulder harness during takeoff and landing.

The jury praised the efforts of persons at Rea Point after the crash considering the extreme weather and was in turn praised by Ed Brogden, lawyer representing the Crown, for its efforts in establishing "when, where, how and by what means" the 32 men came to their deaths.

Praise for the jury and the handling of the entire inquest was expressed by Diane Pertson of Yellowknife, sister of the pilot of the Electra. Mrs. Pertson was among those calling for a full inquiry and has issued a detailed statement disputing the Ministry of Transport (MoT) report of the crash which lays much of the blame on the pilot.

Mrs. Pertson especially objected to an inference that the pilot was an alcoholic and was partially "Incapacitated" before the crash.

She said she was satisfied with the jury's carefully-worded conclusions and added:

"I just hope that Ottawa doesn't think it can sweep it under the table."

She indicated she was not prepared to see that happen. The federal government owns 45 per cent of Panarctic Oils.

SITHOLE 'TORTURED'

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The president or Rhodesia's African National Council said Sunday that missing black nationalist Edson Sithole was being held and tortured by Rhodesian security police.

Abel Muzorewa said ANC supporters recently saw Sithole in a Rhodesian police station. Anad Muzorewa added Sunday that he has learned Sithole has gone on a hunger strike out of fear that the authorities might try to poison him.

Sithole, ANC publicity chairman, disappeared last month in Salisbury along with his secretary.

Stay Out of Lebanon, Israel Warns Arabs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Israel will give serious consideration to military intervention in Lebanon if any Arab nation steps into the current civil war there, according to Simcha Dinitz, Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

"We are very concerned that our northern border with Lebanon should not become a border of confrontation," he told a news conference Sunday. "If there is an invasion of Lebanon by any Arab country, Israel will have to weigh the consequences very seriously."

He would not say, however, under what specific conditions Israel would confront a third party in the Lebanese situation.

Dinitz also criticized Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

He said he did not think Sadat's visit to the United States signaled any change in U.S.-Israeli relations or that the U.S. would acquire new friendships at the expense of old, trusted ones.

Meanwhile, cargo for Israel — a load of Romanian cement in a Greek ship — has moved through the Suez Canal for the first time in at least 15 years.

The passage Sunday through the 103-mile waterway was made possible by the new Sinai accord negotiated by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

The 9,645-ton Olympus, leased to the Israeli Zim Lines, was due today at Israel's Red Sea port of Eilat, a government communique said. The ship is expected to spend several days taking on phosphate for Europe, then make the return rip back through the cana' om south to north, a spoke an for the transport minist aid.

In Beirut, anot lull in the Christian-Moslem war set in today, with only scattered shooting reported.

Mine Royalty Tax Reviewed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mines Minister Gary Lauk announced Saturday a full review of taxes and royalties imposed on British Columbia's mining industry.

Lauk said he would appoint a team to review mining legislation, mining safety and mineral royalies, and they would report as soon as possible.

"Two things have happened since we passed Bill 31," Lauk told a regional meeting of the United Steelworkers of America. Bill 31 is the Mineral Royalties Act.

"One is that London metal prices, which are the world metal prices, have fallen dramatically. There is little sign of an increase in the near future.

"The second thing is the enroachment of the federal government on what has traditionally been a provincial tax-field.

"They (Ottawa) have made the basic royalty — the economic rent that is payable to the public of this province who own the natural resources — non-deductible. That amounts to a lot of money.

Lauk said that because of these two factors there are some mines that connot operate.

"Your government must decide whether to let them close and 300 or 400 families lose their employment, or do we take a different position? I don't know what the final answer should be."

Lauk said he supported the controversial Collective Bargaining Continuation Act which ordered work to resume in the pulp, food, propane and B.C. Rail industries.

"Anyone who says there is a breach between labor and this party (the New Democratic Party) is gravely mistaken.

"We have our differences and we take shots at each other and that's no bad."

"If any trade union member believed there can be any kind of representation (by the Social Credit party) on behalf of the working man of this province, that would be a case for the psychiatric unit."

Lauk said he understood why some people thought the act was wrong.

"(But) we moved legislatively to preserve the collective bargaining system."

TREASURES TAKEN FROM CATHEDRAL

COLOGNE (AP)—An international hunt is on for two men who stole two sackloads of priceless church treasures from the Cologne Cathedral.

Police reported no immediate leads on the daring burglars who got into the medieval Roman Catholic cathedral in this West Germany city late Saturday night by way of scaffolding for repairmen on the outside of the buiding, evaded electronic alarms and used nylon mountain climbers' ropes to make their way through air ducts to the locked treasury under the main floor.

They stole 15 church art works, including several golden monstrances, several jewelled crosses, a peace staff and eight bishops' rings. They also used garden shears to cut away gems from other monstrances, the jewelled vessels in which the consecrated Host is displayed.

Police estimated the value of the missing items at about $1 million, but a church official said they were "priceless treasures" hundreds of years old.

"No one can say how much they were worth," he said.

Passersby said they saw two men, about 30 and 45 years old, climb down the scaffolding from the roof of the twin-spired cathedral shorty before 1 a.m. Sunday. They were carrying bulging sacks.

The Race Hobbles On

Despite the Canadian Labor Congress promise of a $500,000 war chest to fight federal wage and price controls the Trudeau administration plugs along at improving its hastily conceived plan. Last week it was tit for tat. An expected change raising the $600 maximum wage increase for lower paid workers was announced by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald. Under the new plan a person can increase his hourly pay to $3.50 per hour without coming under the federal controls. That is, a person making only $1.75 per hour can double his income without incurring the government's displeasure.

If this change is only fair under the circumstances, the new rules applying to dividends are more cloudy. Under the original controls, dividends during the first 12 months of the program could not exceed rates paid in 1974. Now dividends can continue to be paid at the quarterly rate in effect when the anti inflation program was announced. At first glance this would appear to be a small point. But knowing that a large majority of those receiving dividend benefits are among the wealthiest people in Canadian society casts the move in another light. Still, it is not that easy to wave a cynical finger at the government.

Many other Canadians on fixed incomes derive most of their money from dividend payments. Limiting these people to the rates of the last fiscal year could hurt their financial positions badly. Once embarked on the road to controls the path can become tortuous. For every action there are five equal and opposite reactions. On the dividend question, however, perhaps the government could have made a distinction between types of people receiving dividends. As it stands under the amended rule, the rich get richer and the poor receive a slightly thicker bone.

As the labyrinth of Ottawa's controls slowly become visible, one begins to feel sorry for the government. No system, whether comprehensive or not, could be entirely fair. Lapses, mistakes and simple bungling are sure to follow. But to date the promised machinery is not even functioning. When and if it does lurch into action it must strive for fairness. So many inequitable holes are visible all ready. Can the government shape it into a workable format before it collapses of its own weight? It would appear to be a race with time and those opposed to the controls. If the government doesn't win this heat, the race will become longer and more onerous for the whole country.

CLEU Comes of Age

When the provincial government formed the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit in 1974 it looked like another showpiece designed to take the heat off politicians who weren't prepared to tackle serious crime problems. In fact CLEU has been a pleasant surprise to police officers and the public. Not only have its co-ordinated efforts resulted in some large drug hauls; it is fostering a sense of communication and cooperation among policemen, prosecutors and others in the criminal justice system.

As CLEU chairman and deputy Attorney General David Vickers told the second annual Pacific Northwest Crime Seminar here last week the days of "buy and bust" are over. In drug enforcement undercover officers sometimes get dealers to sell them small amounts of illegal drugs and then arrest the person. Not only is this a form of entrapment, it results in recycling the same tired addicts through the court and prison system. Drug wholesalers and those who bankroll large purchases usually go scot free. If properly developed, agencies like CLEU can change the old attitudes of adding up arrest records to constructive policies of preventing crime or at least routing out the fat cats who remain far away from the street.

This kind of investigation is tedious, offering only occasional rewards. But CLEU with much help from the efficient RCMP, has proved that organizations can be broken and wholesalers convicted. Because of the high profits involved other syndicates immediately spring up, but every drug ring destroyed means less heroin or cocaine on the streets, and perhaps fewer addicts. CLEU's initial success is gratifying. Degrees of communication and cooperation among law enforcement agencies are difficult to measure. If CLEU's role seems intangible, it has produced enough real results in one year to justify itself.

RICHARD GWYN

. . . At Least They Didn't Lie

Trust is a rare commodity in these post-Watergate, post-Vietnam days. So it matters a great deal to discover that our government did not lie during the 1970 October crisis.

Much more limited in its consequences, far shorter in its duration, the October crisis still was, at its worst moments, as fundamental a trial of our political system as either of those events were of the U.S. system. It forced Canadians to take sides on a single, central issue; it confronted those in power with decisions none of them ever imagined they would have to take.

Scarred and bruised, our system yet survived. At times the government misled the public. At times it withheld important information. At times it manipulated public opinion — the theatrical state funeral for Pierre Laporte was the least forgivable example. But at no time did the government lie to the public.

This was the central difference between the October crisis and others elsewhere, such as Watergate, Viet Nam, or to go further back, the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.

There was no conspiracy, no cover-up.

Convert to WMA

For a short time, I worked part-time on the television program on the crisis which the CBC broadcast Sunday. I left once it became evident the show would simply recount the incidents one after the other rather than examine them the sources of terrorist zealotry, the superficiality of the media, for example.

It's neither here nor there that I personally began my research as an opponent of the War Measures Act and ended as a partial, and reluctant, convert to its necessity. My larger discovery was that there was no discovery to make.

There were fresh bits of information, of course, some of them important, such as the secret Strategic Operations Centre headed by a senior aide of the Prime Minister. Some of its activities were fanciful: "scenarios" plotted on colored, wall-length charts, psychologists hired to compare the FLQ communiques with those of the Tupamaro guerrillas of Uruguay.

Other acts were in deadly earnest: troops rushed by helicopter to a Montreal CIL munitions plant left unprotected by a strike of its guards; a daily analysis of the propaganda effects of all Montreal radio and TV broadcasts, on the basis of strictly confidential and highly improper reports provided by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Useful grist, all of this, to a journalist's mill. But no more than that. The real story is that there is no real story. The public then was told the essential facts. The man on the street's judgment whether the War Measures Act was right or not is as good as any insider's.

On the CBC program, former cabinet minister Eric Kierans called the Act "overkill." He is right — but in hindsight. Without the act, student street marches were certain; violence was probable and shootings and deaths were possible. Right-wing vigilantes were a likely cause of FLQ martyrs. Policemen attended the press conferences of FLQ lawyer Robert Lemieux, less to spot who was there than to protect him from assassins.

The challenge that had to be met was,

OCTOBER CRISIS
. . . troops on the Hill

as Prime Minister Trudeau said, "the erosion of the public will."

Until the act was proclaimed, public order in Montreal was close to collapse. The only alternative — to bargain with the terrorists — would have been to make them heroes, and to sap the public will still further. Once that will is gone, there is no foundation left for law, or for liberty.

The excess was not in the imposition of the War Measures Act itself, which restored public confidence, but in the way it was applied.

Governments govern as much by symbolic acts as by real ones. The troops in the streets, the martial law, the ban on demonstrations, all were needed as a psychological gesture.

The outrage was the midnight arrest of 469 people. All but a handful were innocent; none provided information that led to the capture of the FLQ cells.

For the sake of symbol, the government sold out to the police, who were itching to arrest someone — anyone. Few ministers realized how many would be arrested. Kierans, at the time, expected that 25-50 known terrorists would be hauled in. How could the War Measures Act, so patently unjust in the way it was applied, yet have become an unavoidable necessity?

"Canadians assumed," he said, "that terrorism could not happen here." True. Except that Trudeau should have known better. And did.

"Sufficient information was available to forewarn the government of the possibility — probability of an October crisis occuring," the Strategic Operations Centre group concluded in a secret report to cabinet on Dec. 6, 1970, after the peak of the crisis had passed but before Jasper Cross' release.

Warned of Subversion

Despite this advance information the RCMP on July 23, 1970, three months before the crisis, warned of subversive activities that "clearly represent a serious threat to the unity of the country and to law and order," the Operations Centre report concluded that "little or no action was taken . . . . No special legislation was prepared for use in a possible emergency."

Cabinet and government, as much as ordinary Canadians, chose to assume it couldn't happen here. When the crisis hit, the government lacked any legislative response except the overkill of the War Measures Act.

All the sources of violences were visible long beforehand: the genuine economic grievances of the "white niggers" in Montreal's east-end slums. The post-electoral frustrations of the separatists. The romance that revolution held in the late '60s for intellectuals and for "salon separatists" in the media, the universities and government. Lastly, the shallowness of the media, which began by exploiting the sensationalism of the drama and ended by cowering before the indirect censorship of the government.

The 469 arrested without warrant and without bail paid the price for the government's lack of planning. Since most of us agreed with what the government did, we share the shame of that act.

At least as important a source of pride, though, is to realize that our government, during our single truly appalling political crisis since World War II, did not lie.

FRANK RUTTER

Wary U.S. Eyes Bilingualism

WASHINGTON — Although the subject is officially taboo, the French connection in Canada has recently attracted new interest and comment among Americans.

The seemingly gratuitous appearance of an editorial on this subject in the New York Times is one example.

The editorial deplored "the awesome power of bilingualism to perpetuate differences within a country, deepen antagonisms and make national politics an endless walk on an ethnic tightrope."

Language separatism, it said, "can only grow more harmful with the years."

It was strong stuff, not a little tinged with smugness in noting that there was better mobility in a unilingual country freer from "the friction of clashing cultures."

It coincided with considerable discussion of differences between what one speaker characterized as "French Canada and other Canada" at a seminar conducted by the Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International Studies.

Nervous Watchers

A further coincidence was some recent musing on the subject of separatism by a U.S. government official in a private chat.

One reason for the current U.S. interest in Quebec's Official Language Act and its social and political impact, which some observers believe may have been a factor in the recent Montreal federal byelection defeat of Pierre Juneau.

Another, subtler reason may be U.S. preoccupation with minority rights, recently expressed in legislation establishing special language considerations in elections.

The government official revealed that there is continuing concern, although still in abstract terms, about the long-range potential for political mischief in Canada's language problems. The next election in Quebec, it is thought, could prove a crucial turning point depending upon the popularity of the Parti Quebecois.

All this is regarded as a matter of extreme delicacy and would never be raised publicly, or with Canadian officials, by anyone in the State Department.

This was stressed by a former assistant secretary of state, at the Johns Hopkins seminar. "It is strictly off-limits," said Willis Armstrong. "But," he added, "Canadians will understand if the informed watchers are now and then a bit nervous."

All the Americans do is watch and hope everything turns out "all right," Mr. Armstrong said. Yet, he conceded, U.S. opinion is solicited by Canadians on both sides of domestic controversy. "If one says that a unified and united Canada is in the interest of the U.S., one can be accused of being unsympathetic to the wishes of a strong and assertive minority. If one expresses sympathy with the minority in its aspirations, one can be accused of Machiavellian intentions designed to encourage subversion."

Ironically, such pressures are sometimes inviting, as was implied by another seminar participant, Dale Thomson, vice-president of McGill University. One such instance is cultural. 'Because they have the protective barrier of a different language, French Canadians feel less threatened by American influences," Dr. Thomson said. "Anti-American sentiment is much stronger in Toronto than it is in Quebec City."

Another field is commerce. The Foreign Investment Review Act, Dr. Thomson asserted, was inspired by English Canada "and has not been received with enthusiasm by the government of Quebec, which is still trying to attract capital from south of the border for development projects."

The U.S. experience with minorities has been totally different, partially because of the "melting pot" philosophy and partly because the minorities themselves are different in nature.

Language is not the basic issue, although there is a parallel of sorts between Canadian bilingualism and U.S. "affirmative action," the program launched by President Lyndon Johnson in 1965 to curtail employment discrimination on grounds of race, natural origin, color and sex.

Virtual quotas under the program have irritated employers.

Special Provisions

"The most sought-after emplyee in the U.S. today is a black, Spanish surnamed, female engineer," the magazine Business Week observed recently.

The main difference between the countries is that the U.S. has tended to isolate ethnic opportunity from ethnic colture, including language. But, recently, there has been more concern about language, including fears that French culture in New England states such as Vermont is dying.

This year, for the first time, special provisions have been enacted to recognize language minorities in federal elections. The full effect will be apparent in the 1976 general elections when bilingual facilities and materials will be made available by the government and special monitors posted at the polls. These provisions apply in areas where five per cent of the eligible voters belong to "a single-language minority."

So far, there are only four languages involved — Spanish, Chinese, Filipino and Japanese — plus a number of Indian dialects in 307 counties scattered among 26 states.

Laughing Clown

Premier Barrett has many times been referred to as a clown, because of his precious gift of laughter. This is what one of the greatest philosophers of all times said about laughter — "To know how to laugh, is to know how to govern" . . . Goethe.

Mr. Premier, you have proved this beyond the shadow of a doubt. — Enid M. Webster, 257 Superior Street.

Mining Bill

It is reported that the Socreds will include in their program to be submitted to their annual Convention an undertaking to abolish Bill 31 — the Mining Act.

The non-renewable natural resources of the province such as copper, coal, zinc, lead, oil, gas etc are the heritage of the people of this province and not of the Mining and Oil Companies. In view of this surely the people of this province should enjoy the fruits of their heritage. Until the advent of the NDP government there were no royalties charged on any of these non-renewable natural resources except 25 cents per ton on coal and a very small royalty on iron-ore mined in the Charlottes. In addition the oil and mining companies enjoyed many privileges such as no taxation in the first three years in the life of a mine.

I lived for some 30 years in countries rich in non-renewable natural resources and it's a curious fact that these countries charged royalties far higher than those stipulated in Bill 31 and yet the multi-national corporations stood in line to procure concessions. However here in B.C. royalties are termed a deep socialist plot. We speak of "banana republics" but B.C. and in fact Canada is by far the most prominent "banana republic" of all. We are told that the companies should be taxed on profits but one only has to look at the past to see that taxation has not been the answer as the corporations have enjoyed so many tax concessions and in some cases subsidies. In addition a direct royalty imposed by the province brings the proceeds directly to the Province whereas if a Federal tax is collected the Province only enjoys a part of those royalties.

When Bill 31 was introduced the Mining Companies rebelled and I do not blame them as they had never been used to royalties and the Mining industry was reduced with consequent unemployment. It is to the credit of the union to which the miners belong that they backed the Government and Bill 31.

In my view the greatest tragedy of all was that these non-renewable natural resources were shipped abroad in raw form with the loss of so many jobs to the people of our Province. In the countries where I worked for some 30 years the Law insisted that a large percentage of the oil production must be processed in the country of origin — thereby giving employment to their own people. We here in B.C. and in fact in Canada, have the nerve to classify such countries as "banana republics." After years of experience I know which country is the real "banana republic." However in order to placate the monied interests the Socreds would not hesitate to abolish Bill 31—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1701 Cedar Hill Crossroads.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 3, 1915

From the Doukhobor colonies in the province, through the Canadians living in the neighborhood, come stories from time to time telling of the state of virtual slavery in which the members are to Peter Verigin. Under the heading Peter Rules With An Iron Hand, the Grand Forks Sun in its issue of last Friday says that Verigin himself whipped bloody a dozen young Doukhobor women aged between 18 and 20-who had not turned over their earnings to the society.

BRUTAL TRUTH ON FUNCTION OF COMMONS

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Parliamentary reform is rarely a popular interest. Nine citizens out of 10 haven't a clue about the procedures of the House of Commons. Some will know vaguely that the Senate doesn't count for much; or that there's something known as "question period" which takes place daily; or that the opposition criticizes and the government defends and praises itself there; or that something known as "bills" become laws when Parliament passes them.

Parliamentary procedures are so complex and there are so many traditions and nuances to them that only a few MPs know more than the basics of the system. These experts — the Knowles, Baldwins and MacEachens — are often so far "inside" the system that they couldn't see, even if they get concerned about it, how to popularize the reform issue for the mass public.

It is also impossible to make the need for parliamentary reform a major partisan issue which might move thousands of voters to say: Clear and clean the system: Give us something more effective, vital and understandable.

These opening generalizations on the topic were triggered by reading a paper titled "An Outline for House of Commons Reform" which was recently leaked to the press gallery. It was prepared by Mitchell Sharp and his staff.

The paper runs to 5,000 words or so. Much of it is understandable to lay readership until the authors get into such abstruse topics as switching Parliament's legislative emphasis from second reading stage to third reading stage or restructuring the rules, composition and duties of House standing committees.

The critical analysis is brutal, direct and, I think, exact. The Commons is not fulfilling its roles as: (a) legislative mill; (b) as a running (and failsafe) political forum; (c) as a close examiner of the administration and spending of the government.

"Ministers are impatient . . . private members on both sides of the aisle are frustrated by their apparent incapacity to affect policy; political reporters give the Commons only passing attention; those few scholars who study Parliament invariably publish prescriptions for substantial reform."

For the ministry, the House is a choke-hole; for the ordinary MPs it's a frustrating, windy bore; for the journalists it's a yawn; for the public it's a mystery which preoccupies high-priced men as marbles fascinate young lads every couple of spring seasons.

The paper gives data on how the time of the House has been used over the past 10 sessions. Government business gets just over half the time. Each session fills from 900 to 1,000 hours of formal sitting. Despite this large span of hours, no government in the past decade has ever come close to getting through into law in any session the bills it should have.

Somewhere between six and 10 thousand questions, written and oral, are put each session and most of them are answered in a half-assed way. MPs make from 2,000 to 3,000 speeches in Commons debates each session. By and large, MPs don't listen to each other's speeches or pay much attention to each other's questions and answers. There's all this talk day after day, which goes unreported (thank God), in the media and largely unnoticed by the executives and administrators of the government.

In sum, the House of Commons is an inept, time-wasting joke; it largely is irrelevant even to the legislation it passes; it doesn't really scrutinize governmental activity.

I have telescoped and exaggerated slightly the critical thrust of the Sharp paper. The thrust is more impressive than the prescription. Nowhere in the paper does Sharp look at the governmental and bureaucratic failures, represented for example in the blind man's bluff process of six to eight thousand parliamentary questions a year, most of them bootless. Sharp doesn't read into that farce one of the complementary causes of inane parliamentary hours by the score. The cause? Overweening government secrecy. A highly stereotyped stone wall of governmental insistence on privacy. Closed government.

What is pathetic about An Outline For House of Commons Reform is the great hope that the House leader pins on reform arising out of the televising of House proceedings.

What a crock of apple pie that conclusion is. Even if Parliament legislates to force the CBC, CTV and the Global network to carry actual or delayed telecasts of House sittings every day in prime time, the product wouldn't get relatively more viewers than Hansard gets subscribers or readers.

If the House doesn't develop policy or really influence policy decisions, if it doesn't examine spending and administrators closely — and it doesn't do these things now — then it remains what it is — just a failsafe forum for sounding off and a register of who the electorate decided at the last election should man the ministerial pimple on the back of the bureaucratic elephant.

And Now, Justice Financed by Commercials

By ROBERT BENDINER

It appears that former president Richard Nixon has nothing to hide, after all. His noticeable reluctance to tell his story to Congress and the courts may have struck the suspicious as evasiveness, but we know now that it was nothing of the sort. He has come forward willingly and forthrightly to testify before David Frost over a national television network. You can't ask for more openness than that.

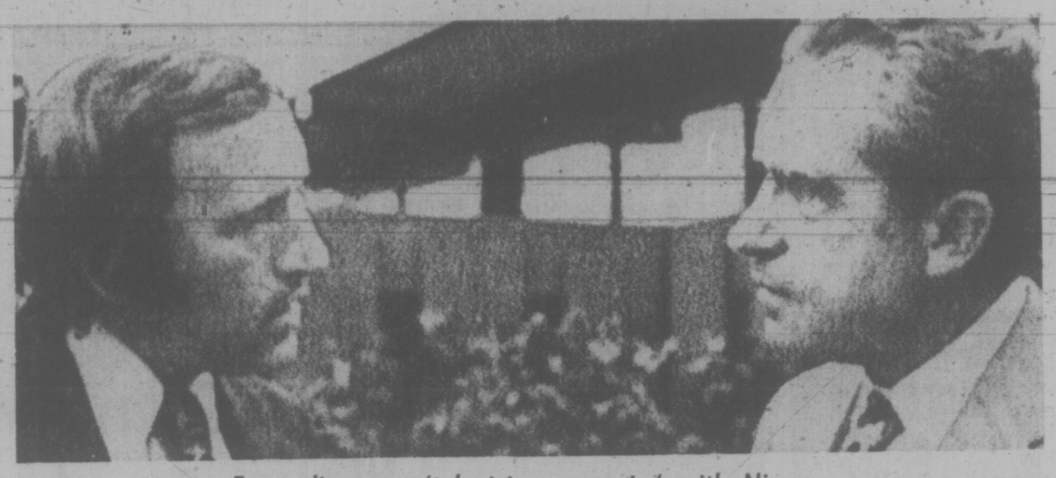
Mr. Nixon's decision may prove an historic landmark in the development of the law. Hereafter, those accused of an offence, no matter how serious, may reject indictments, true bills and all that antiquated legal freight, electing instead to appear on any TV show with a rating high enough to claim the public's confidence.

The advantages over the creaking machinery of traditional proceedings are clear. The defendant not only gets a full hearing in prime time but, instead of losing money by having to take weeks off from work and to scrape up bail to boot, he is handsomely paid for his trial appearance — in itself an encouragement to defendants to turn themselves in.

At the same time, the state saves considerable cash by not having to lay out for a trial. Instead of being a burden on the taxpayer, justice is financed by commercials. And, not least, the ugly chance of perjury is eliminated by the total absence of oaths. This should assure a relaxed air during the proceedings, with the truth as likely to emerge as it is under the present rigid system. More so perhaps, because there would be a heavy sanction against lying: if the accused is not convincing, he has little chance of winning an Emmy.

Think how much better it would have been if Charles I had been able to bypass those Parliamentary fanatics and tell his story directly over the 17th century equivalent of television. "It's nice to have you here again, Your Ex-Majesty,' the host would start off, playfully twiddling his quill. "That sounds funny, 'Ex-Majesty,' " but what is the rule now? Anybody here know? What do people call you — Mr. Stewart? Charles?"

"Call me whatever you like, Johnny," the harried guest monarch would say. "My enemies do. Mind you, I'm not criticizing them. They have a perfect right to do that, but legally I am still the King. That is my duty, and I will always do my duty, as I have in the past."



Frost discusses 'television memoirs' with Nixon

"That's very admirable, Mr. —er—King. I wonder if you'd mind telling us, just in your own words, what started all this trouble between you and Parliament. People say you were hard to get along with and that you wanted to get rid of certain members of the House of Commons. How many of you folks in the audience would like to hear about that? Let's see. All but two, and they're asleep. So how about it, Your Ex-Majesty?"

"I don't mind talking about it. Not at all. Except, of course, for three or four matters that are strictly classified. I want to set this country straight about just what happened. I owe that to the people who look to me for leadership. But the King has to protect the national security, and I intend to do just that." So it would go.

Other big-time defendants might have been similarly benefited by this Nixonian legal innovation. With no need to limit the proceedings to talk shows, Bluebeard would surely have come out ahead on "What's My Line?" And Mata Hari would have done better to bet her life on the old Groucho Marx show than gamble it away on that stacked French court martial.

For all that, it is still possible that Richard Nixon may be convicted in Judge Frost's court. After all, he didn't even win a TV acquittal in 1960. But don't bet on it. Even if the television court could subpoena the tapes, Dictabelts and documents, all the pungent language of the Nixon White House would have to be blipped out unless the show were scheduled for late-night slots, and that would so seriously reduce the accused's income that the whole thing would hardly be worth an ex-President's time. In these days of judicial indulgence, who wants to stand trial — even trial by Frost — for less than the million-dollar union minimum?

HELP FROM FRIENDS KEEPS COUNTRY AFLOAT

Egypt Finds Pride Poor Substitute for Food

JONATHAN C. RANDAL

CAIRO — Pride, the Egyptians have found, is no substitue for food.

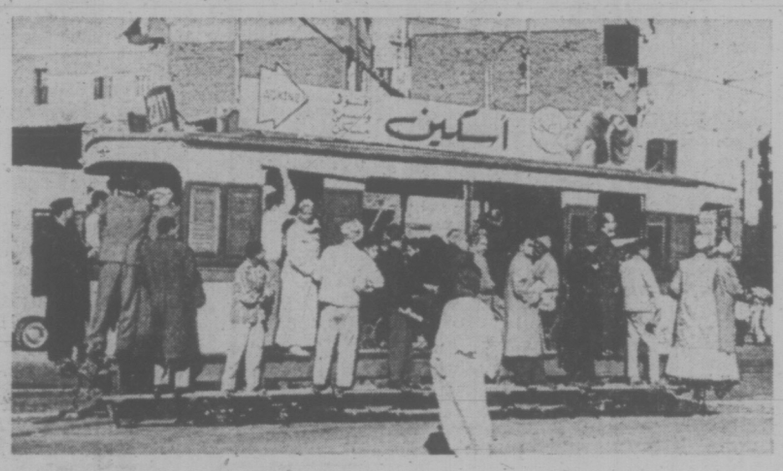
Two years ago this month the stunning Yom Kippur attack restored the pride which had been shattered by the humiliating defeat in the 1967 war with Israel. Today Egypt's economic troubles are accelerating.

The facts are stark: a 30 per cent annual inflation, decreasing living standards, a flourishing black market, enormous foreign debts, overpopulation, a scarcity of arable land, a serious brain drain, stifling bureaucracy, a gigantic and money-losing public sector of the economy.

Unable to feed itself, unwilling — so far at least — to carry out the reforms required for economic recovery, Egypt has become a kind of peaceful Vietnam, sucking its friends ever deeper into the expensive business of keeping the country afloat.

Development experts argue among themselves whether Egypt has reached the point of economic no return, as defined in a recent Rand Corp. study which wrote off the chances of such lands as Chad and Bangladesh. The industrialized West apparently has talked itself into accepting the endless task of aiding Egypt — without imposing the elementary financial disciplines employed elsewhere — not in hopes of estabishing economic health but out of fear that otherwise a dangerous new war would break out.

For the moment, however, President Anwar Sadat appears secure. The two Sinai disengagement accords and the reopening of the Suez Canal, while producing no economic miracles, have provided him with a popular theme: Egypt first, and not the pan-Arabism dear to his late predecessor, the mercurial and now little remembered Gamal Abdel Nasser.



Antiquated transport system in Cairo

The public contemptuously rejects the harsh criticism from Syria, the Palestinians and some other Arab circles of the latest Sinai deal as a "sellout." Taxidrivers and engineers, peasants and intellectuals voice the same refrain, apparently heart-felt. It goes like this: "For a quarter-century, we have bankrupted Egypt for the ungrateful Palestinians. We fought and died while the rest of the Arab world got rich. It's high time they started paying."

They are paying, especially Saudi Arabia but also Kuwait, the emirates of the Persian Gulf and others. Saudi Arabia alone, specialists estimate, has provided more than $1.5 billion in aid to Egypt since the 1973 war.

Some thoughtful Egyptians believe the main domestic benefit of Henry Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy has been the re-cementing of the Cairo-Riyadh connection broken when Egypt and the Saudis took opposite sides in the bloody Yemen civil war of the mid-1960s. One element in the Saudi equation apparently is the belief that it is worthwhile to bankroll Egypt and keep the moderate Sadat in power, if only because a radical in control in Cairo could undermine the conservative Saudi monarchy.

But most of the Saudi funds have gone simply to shore up the economy, not to cure its ills. The Saudis are reluctant to support Sadat's ambitious, multi-billion-dollar schemes to turn Egypt into a major Mid-East economic centre.

Indeed, Arab investors display litle inclination to put big money into Egypt for productive investment purposes. Instead, the newly rich seek quick returns in such fields as real estate, especially luxury hotels.

Some Egyptians are hoping that Sadat's visit to the United States later this month may bring about something of a change. A generous grant backed by Congress, it is felt here, might serve as a symbol and even a kind of guarantee to Arab moneymen, a message that the United States views Egypt as a good investment.

Sadat's ever more bitter anti-Soviet remarks are apparently dictated, at least in part, by a belief that these are the kind of statements Americans — as well as Sasudis — like to hear.

"Egyptians may no longer expect the whole Sixth fleet to steam into Alexandria harbor with wheat and other goodies," one diplomat commented, "but it would be only human for Sadat to hope to come away from Washington with aid double any figure you've heard in public." In the last fiscal year American aid came to $250 million, plus $110 million in Public Law 480 surplus food, and in the later stages of the Kissinger shuttle service there was talk of $500 million in this fiscal year.

Obviously, too, the Egyptian president hopes for some arms aid now that he has just about foreclosed the chance of new weapons deals with the Soviets. He is realistically aware that Congress will not approve the kind of major arms sales in the works for Israel, but he is believed to be seeking defensive aircraft, a symbolic squadron of F-5Es as a minimum, no match for the F-15s and F-16s planned for Israel.

French-built Mirage fighter-bombers, purchased last winter with Saudi money, staged an impressive fly-by at the festivities marking the second anniversary of the Yom Kippur attack. This was intended as a message both to the United States and to Egypt's own armed forces. For the latter it was a signal that Western equipment is available, that the Soviets no longer control Egypt's military posture and that the critics who charge Cairo has opted out of any future war are wrong.

To a degree Egypt remains a military-based society, and keeping the armed forces happy is simple common sense. Sadat is also showing solicitude for the urban middle class and the rural landowners. They are waxing fat on shadowy export-import deals, foreign exchange manipulation, import licenses, real estate speculation. And they make no effort to hide their new-found wealth from their abjectly poor fellow citizens.

"Our middle class," one leftist complained, "is a caricature of the Third World species — fearful of risk-taking, uninterested in investing in industry, on the make for the quick buck to be sent abroad."

Some local critics believe Sadat's policies have appreciably helped perhaps two million of Egypt's 38 million people. Others think the figure cannot be greater than 200,000.

At best, it is a small minority in teeming Egypt. Men like Mohamed Hassanein Heinal, Nasser's confidant now ousted from his throne as editor of the prestigious Cairo daily Al Ahram, make no secret of their reading that Sadat is making a potentially fatal error in counting on a narrow group for support.

Others think there is sense in this. "It's certainly not pretty," one observer remarked, "but if there's not enough to go round, it is not necessarily bad. If you need support, the peasants in the fields can't help you."

Intermittently, Sadat lashes out at corruption, but the shops are crowded with Japanese cameras, Italian beer, imported tape recorders and European fashions which only the new rich can afford.

If indeed Sadat has made a conscious choice as to his supporters some critics say, it is doubtless because he knows better than to believe his own speeches promising an end to rationing, black marketeering and other signs of bad times by 1977.

Fitness Isn't a Dirty Word . . .

Quick now, what does Participaction mean?

But one of the organization's major objectives is to make fitness socially acceptable. It isn't yet.

It all began about four years ago, she says, after a national study revealed Canadians in general are in desparately poor shape. Despite the reality of it, there's national myth we foster of ourselves as "hardy pioneering types."

So: "Participaction," a private non-profit operation based in Toronto, funded in part by the federa government, and now dispersing three staff members across the country to preach the message and persuade the media to promote it.

What Participaction is saying to you is — "Get busy," at something, anything, which will tone your body but not bore you to death.

It's not just a question of overweight, she says. It's the business of tuning your whole system. The reward: feeling better and working better, at school or in the office.

"A lot of peple still feel exercise is silly so they don't want to do it."

"We're trying to get people to find a sense of fun in it."

Participaction can boast some sucesses, like its campaign in Saskatoon. A survey almost two years ago found just three per cent of people there exercised regularly. A mapor promotion has pushed that to 52 per cent and has made jogging and other activities socially acceptable.

Another campaign among 2,000 sedentary employees of a Toronto company promoted walking up and down stairs rather than getting haulded by elevator. The drive was called "stairtrek" and it worked.

One of Participation's current pushes is labelled "walk a block a day." That's not much but it's a start, a commitment.

One way to do it is to get off the bus one stop early. If you drive, you'll have to find your own game to push you closer to that Canadian pioneer image.

City Barbers Won't Follow Vancouver

The minimum price of a haricut at 120 union barber shops in the Vancouver area increased to $4.50 from $4 Saturday but will not go up in Victoria, a barber's union spokesman said.

The Vancouver increase was blamed on higher shop rents and the 12 per cent rise in the cost of living.

CASS-BEGGS CHIDES GOV'T

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government needs an energy minister to improve its liaison with crown corporations and oversee government economic planning, says the retired chairman of B.C. Hydro.

David Cass-Beggs, 67, said in a recent interview he would have liked a closer relationship with the government, "although I never had any clash with government as to hydro policy."

"The main problem was trying to know what the government was thinking. Perhaps the government has given low priority to energy policy because it had so many other things to deal with."

Cass-Beggs came to B.C. Hydro in January, 1973, from a similar position with Manitoba Hydro. His contract was for three years, but he informed the government in May he wished to retire a year earlier.

Flights Cuts Protested

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs, has sent a telegram to Otto Lang, federal minister of transport, protesting the reduction of air services by Pacific Western Airlines to some of British Columbia's more isolated communities.

Nunweiler said Sunday that PWA is reneging on licence obligations if it curtails feeder services from this city to Prince Rupert, on the coast 300 miles from here, Terrace, 240 miles west of here, and Sandspit, on Moresby Island, one of the Queen Charlottes.

The airline announced the cutback in services last week.

Nunweiler said PWA got the feeder service as part of an agreement which allows them to operate on more profitable air routes in the province.

Transprovincial Airlines was originally subcontracted but it says it cannot operate the service without a subsidization.

Own 'Watergate' For Argentina?

BUENOS AIRES (WP) — Argentina's long-dormant opposition political party, the Radical Civic Union, has opened a legislative offensive the press is calling a possible Watergate of Argentina. It could lead to the impeachment of President Isabel Peron.

The initiative comes at a time when Argentina's economic and political disorder is so pervasive as to have this very politically conscious capital buzzing with new rumors of an imminent military coup. In fact, some legislators say privately that the Radical move is kind of a last-ditch effort to show the army that democratic processes are still functioning, in spite of inaction on other fronts.

Like the Watergate scandal in the United States, this one onvolves missepnt funds, mysterious cheques, charges of personal gain and leaks of government information reaching as high as the presidency itself. Unlike the Northern Hemisphere version, however, no one has bothered to charge high government involvement in taped telephone conversations, politically or tivated break-ins, violence or sabotage. Those events would be considered more or less routine here, where 650 persons have been killed in political violence this year.

Instead, the proposed investigation focusses on allegations that Mrs. Peron's former alter ego and social welfare minister, Jose Lopez Rega, played fast and loose with the uncounted millions of dollars under his control. His ministry had access to the profits from the vastly popular national lottery, horse race betting and football pool operations. With the income, never subject to a public accounting, the ministry runs health and benefit programs and charity funds, obtaining additional money for the latter from contributions.

One of those charity funds is the Crusade for Justicialist Solidarity, which Lopez Rega set up in 1973 and centered around Mrs. Peron. In July, Lopez Rega was ousted from office and sent to Spain amid allegations he had enriched himself from his office.

Montreal Mayors Topple

MONTREAL (CP) — Five incumbent mayors were ousted as about 125,000 residents in more than 12 Montreal area suburbs went to the polls Sunday in municipal elections.

In the south shore community of St. Bruno, James Verge, seeking his second term as mayor, lost by more than 500 votes to Serge Daze, a former city councillor and long-time political opponent of Verge.

Meanwhile, in Dorion, former councillor Bernard Graham beat incumbent mayoral candidate Jean Charles Vallee, 1,605 to 1,020.

Chambly Mayor Julien Lachapelle suffered the same fate, finishing third in a four-man race won by Gervais Desourdy.

Chateauguay Centre Mayor Richard Sutterlin had been expected to outpoint councillor Phillippe Bonneau, but lost by more than 7,000 votes.

Beloeil Mayor Phillippe Vezina lost out to Jacques Meunier, as the challenger polled 2,624 to 1,596 for the incumbent.

And in Lorraine, radio reports indicated that the final election result could mean another mayoral upset.

Defence $ Surplus to Go?

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed spending in the billions on military aircraft, now being considered by the government, may go a long way toward wiping out a surplus in defence exports that Canada built up with the United States before and during the Vietnam war.

Depending on how things are computed, Canada and the U.S. might end up almost in balance in defence purchases in each other's country or Canada might fall heir to a massive deficit.

Trade department officials who keep tabs on Canadian-U.S. defence-spending arrangements say nobody knows at present how future purchases will be computed. They say proposals to offset large purchases in the U.S. with spending in Canada add a new dimension to calculations.

The defence arrangement dates from 1959 when the Progressive Conservative government of John Diefenbaker scrapped plans to build the Avro Arrow aircraft.

The arrangement gives Canadaian defence firms almost equal access to U.S. defence contracts with U.S. firms. The idea is to offset high Canadian defence expenditures with U.S. purchases in Canada and to keep purchases nearly in balance.

Total purchases by both countries under the arrangement are about $6.5 billion, trade officials say. Of that, $3.4 billion has been spent in Canada and $3.1 billion in the U.S., giving Canada a current surplus of about $300 million.

In 1971 the total surplus was $508.6 million as the U.S. made purchases to replace Vietnam war losses.

In October of that year, during a U.S. economic crisis, American officials talked of reducing the U.S. defence deficit and that of the U.S.-Canada auto pact before removing economic constraints they had applied against Canada. There was one report that the Americans would insist on Canada purchasing a Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft to reduce the U.S. defence deficit.

The question was never resolved and the large Canadian surplus started to dwindle as the U.S. came out of the Vietnam war.

Latest figures show that in 1973 Canada sold $198 million in defence goods to the U.S. and imported $232 million. In 1974 Canada exported $130 million and imported $281 million.

Incidentally, figures show that Canada enjoys a comfortable defence surplus with other countries. In 1974 it exported $130 million in defence goods and imported $27 million; the year before it exported $110 million worth and imported $37 million.

The Canadian surplus with the U.S. may disappear under purchases now being considered of between $1 billion and $2 billion in new fighter aircraft and between $500 million and $1 billion for new long-range patrol aircraft (LRPA).

In the past, defence-arrangement figures, which are kept by the Canadian trade department on behalf of both countries, have not included such things as non-military offset purchases.

Now proposals by American companies seeking to sell aircraft to Canada mention millions of dollars in industrial benefits to offset Canadian spending in the U.S. Many of these benefits cannot be regarded as military.

So the whole calculation process may have to be changed or Canadians may show a substantial deficit under the arrangement.

Trade offficials describe the Canadian defence industry as in fair shape. Airframe companies now are in poor condition, they say.

Some small companies doing subcontract work were "going like gangbusters." Other companies dealing in communications, electronics and other specialized fields also were doing well.

Munitions companies and others that prospered supplying componeents such as fuses during the Vietnam war were reported feeling the pinch. Crown-owned Canadian Arsenals Ltd. was described as barely ticking over.

Canadian governments save always rejected charges that this country supplied armaments specifically for use in Vietnam. Canadian sales were placed in U.S. inventories, they said. What happened after that was the business of the Americans.

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

guaranteed 8.75% first year and 9.50% for remaining 8 years.

High Quality. In these uncertain times, investor emphasis should be on quality securities. Canada Savings Bonds—backed by the Federal Government—are Canada's safest investment.

Instant Cash. Canada's Savings Bonds can be cashed at any time without risk of loss.

Cutler Kicks Lions to Death

Times News Services

The rain in Vancouver fell mainly on the B.C. Lions Saturday as Edmonton Eskimos' Dave Cutler kicked his way into the Canadian Football League record books and kicked the Lions into last place in the final Western Conference standings.

Eskimos had already clinched first place when Cutler, a resident of Victoria, booted four converts before 15,765 shivering fans at Empire Stadium to give Edmonton a 12-8 win.

The Esks will wait while second-place Saskatchewan Roughriders entertain third-place Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday afternoon in a sudden-death Western Conference semi-final. Bombers finished third despite a 35-26 loss Sunday to Calgary Stampeders in Calgary.

In that one, Stamps' Willie Burden set a CFL rushing record by running for 239 yards in 33 carries to end the season with 1,897 yards and 329 carries. That surpassed the 1,794 yards gained by Calgary's Earl Lunsford in 1961 and broke the league mark for carries by five, held by Saskatchewan's George Reed.

Cutler ended the season with 40 field goals, breaking the single-season record of 36 set last year by Ottawa Rough Riders' Gerry Organ. His kicks covered 32, 30, 29 and 46 yards.

The 12 points also gave Cutler 169 for the season, 21 more than the record of 148 set in 1969 by Tommy-Joe Coffey of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Edmonton's George McGowan caught nine passes against B.C. for a season total of 97, one more than the record set in 1967 by Calgary's Terry Evanshen.

Organ kicked four field goals and added four converts Sunday as Ottawa clinched first place in the Eastern Conference by thrashing Montreal Alouettes 46-6. The second place Als meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the EFC semi-final next Sunday in Montreal and the winner plays in Ottawa Nov. 16 in the final.

The Ticats clinched third place Saturday by beating Toronto Argonauts 26-10 at Hamilton.

A Steel Trap for Bengals

By The Associated Press

Terry Bradshaw threw for two touchdowns and ran for a third, and safety Mike Wagner choked off a Cincinnati comeback with two interceptions to lead Pittsburgh Steelers past Cincinnati Bengals, 30-24, Sunday in a National Football League game.

It was Cincinnati's first loss and left the American Conference East Division in a three-way tie. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Houston all have 6-1 records.

In other games, Minnesota — the NFL's only unbeated team — stayed that way with a 28-17 victory over Green Bay; Washington outscored Dallas 30-24 in overtime; Buffalo edged New York Jets 24-23; Miami bombed Chicago 46-13; Houston got past Kansas City 17-13; New Orleans trimmed New England 24-17; Baltimore defeated Cleveland 21-7; Oakland overwhelmed Denver 42-17, and Detroit rallied past San Francisco 28-17.

New York Giants meat San Diego 35-24 Saturday and Los Angeles is at Philadelphia tonight.

Fran Tarkenton passed for 285 yards and three touchdowns as Minnesota rallied past the Packers. Billy Kilmer dove over from one yard out to give Washington its sudden-death triumph over Dallas.

Joe Ferguson combined with O. J. Simpson on a 64-yard touchdown pass play with 3:46 left to lift Buffalo over the Jets.

Bob Griese threw for 288 yards and three touchdowns, including a 79-yard play to Nat Moore and a 58-yarder to Freddie Solomon, in Miami's romp over Chicago.

Dori Pastorini combined with Ken Burrough on touchdown pass plays of 77 and 57 yards, and Bob Adkins intercepted a short Mike Livingston pass at the Oilers' four in the closing minutes for Houston.

Archie Manning collaborate with rookie speedster Larry Burton on a 71-yard touchdown play and set up another score with a 56-yarder to Burton as New Orleans interim coach Ernie Hefferle, who replaced the fired John North earlier in the week, made a successful debut.

Ken Stabler threw for two touchdowns in the third period and Pete Banaszak added two more on short runs in the fourth for Oakland.

Cats Are Dogged by Inconsistency

Victoria Cougars are having a hard time finding the early-season consistency they showed last year, but Kamloops Chiefs don't seem to have that problem.

The Chiefs maintained their hold on second place in the Western Canada Hockey League's western division by dealing the Cougars an 8-2 setback Sunday in Kamloops.

The loss, coupled with Medicine Hat Tigers' 14-7 victory over Flin Flon Bombers, dropped the Cougars into fourth place.

A shaky first-period start hurt the Cougars hardest. The start and result were in contrast to Saturday night's 6-2 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings at Memorial Arena, when the Cougars jumped into a 3-0 lead and made it 5-0 before conceding the visitors a pair of third-period goals.

The weekend split left Victoria with a 6-7-2 won-lost-tied record, not quite as good as the 8-5-2 mark Cougars compiled a year ago. The discrepancy in the standing isn't as great as the defensive difference that showed at the weekend.

Where there was good cohesion between forwards and defence Saturday, it was noticeably absent Sunday. So much so, in fact, that coach Pat Ginnell benched his high-scoring line of Jim Gustafson, Danny Lucas and Jeff McDill in Sunday's first period.

That was the line that accounted for four of Saturday's six goals.

Goaltender Gerry Simpson, solid Saturday, couldn't be faulted for Sunday's eight goals. He was touched for four in the first period as the Chiefs outshot the Cougars 21-5.

Still, Ginnell hinted that Murray Bannerman, obtained from Winnipeg for a three-game trial, may make his first start Tuesday when the Wheat Kings return to Memorial Arena for their final appearance of the season.

Ginnell also had another problem. Forward Alvin Moore met with Ginnell, suggested he isn't seeing enough ice time and asked to be returned to Saskatchewan to play for Prince Albert Raiders. He left Sunday.

Ginnell saw no problem in the play of defenceman Lorry Gloeckner and winger Curt Fraser. They were standouts in both games. Although Fraser failed to score, he was a going concern.

Rookie Dale Ewasiuk, recalled from Nanaimo Clippers last week, scored a goal in each game, as did Gustafson. Lucas enjoyed one of his most productive nights Saturday, scoring twice and setting up two goals.

The Tigers tied Flin Flon 5-5 Saturday and then came through with the 14-7 breakout Sunday as the line of Don Murdoch, Greg Carroll and Morris Lukowich erupted for 19 scoring points. Murdoch, who scored four goals, accounted for eight of the points.

In other Sunday games, Chris Dyer, acquired recently from Kamloops, scored three goals as Calgary Centennials rebounded from a 5-1, first-period deficit to edge Lethbridge Broncos 9-7; New Westminster took over after the Wheat Kings scored the first two goals to defeat Brandon 5-2, and Saskatoon Blades moved into a tie for the Eastern Division lead by defeating Winnipeg Clubs 6-5.

Scorpions Cool Off

NORTH VANCOUVER — Victoria Scorpions, who shattered scoring records while staging an impressive comeback victory Saturday over North Shore Mountaineers, couldn't find the right combination again Sunday and dropped a 101-91 decision to the Mountaineers in Dogwood Senior Men's Basketball League play.

On Saturday, Scorpions hammered in a record 46 points during the fourth quarter to defeat Mountaineers 136-123 and set another mark for most points scored in one game.

North Shore led 62-51 at half time in the Saturday game and held a 54-39 advantage at the same point in the Sunday encounter.

Bob Burrows, last season's league scoring champion, led Scorpions on Saturday with 33 points but was covered extremely well on Sunday and could only manage 15.

Gord Hoshal, who led the Saturday comeback by scoring 16 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter, set the overall pace Sunday with 20 points.

"The one thing we've got to start working on is defence," said coach Howard Tooby after the Sunday game. "We learned a lot today."

Scorpions trailed by 21 points late in the game Sunday when Tooby sent in brothers Don and Walt Burrows and Barry Burch to lead a full-court press. This tactic brought the Victoria club within five points with six minutes left on the clock and the club's "big guns" were put back on the floor.

Unfortunately, the concentration on offense left Scorpions vulnerable and the North Shore club gradually expanded their lead to 10 points.

Rugby Loser Climbs

Cowichan moved into second place of the Victoria Rugby Union's annual Ellis Cup competition Sunday despite losing 9-4 to Castaways in Duncan.

The round-robin competition is decided on the number of tries scored in matches among the six sides.

Cowichan scored one try to boost its total to 14.

James Bay Athletic Association scored nine tries while tripping University of Victoria Vikings 46-12 Saturday and boosted its leading total to 29 while Vikings managed two tries for a total of 12.

In another Saturday match, Oak Bay Wanderers ran their total to 13 by scoring eight in a 36-10 decision over Velox.

Castaways scored one try for a total of seven while Velox has two over-all.

DAGG FOURSOME REACHES FINAL

VANCOUVER — A Victoria Curling Club rink skipped by Keith Dagg joined seven mainland "regulars" in the final showdown for top honors in the ninth annual Evergreen bonspiel.

The eight, all familiar threats in Coast playdowns and bonspiels, started sudden-death play today for the winners' share of $5,600 in prizes.

Lynn Mason of Burnaby and New Westminster's Bernie Sparkes qualified through the "A" event while Jake Block of Abbotsford and Glen Pierce of Maple Ridge made it through the "B" event.

Dagg, former Victorian Jim Armstrong who now curls out of Vancouver, Brent Giles of North Vancouver and Gary Sigurdson of Cloverdale were the last chance qualifiers out of "C" event.

Block defeated Dagg 6-4 in a "B" semi-final early Sunday but the Victoria skip came back through the final event, sealing appearance in the final with a 6-4 decision over Vancouver's Vic Wood.

Hornets Upset T-Men

Saanich Chew Excavating Hornets took over some travel reservations that had been made by Cowichan Timbermen.

Hornets upset runaway league-champion Timbermen 10-7 in the sudden-death Vancouver island Canadian Football legue playoff final at Macdonal Park and earned a berth in the provincial final next Sunday against Renfrew Trojans at Vancouver' Empire Stadium.

A tight defence led by Kym Clarke, Ken Mitchell, Rob Fee and Murray Hicke provided the key to the Hornet victory. Clarke, who also plays on the offensive unit, scored the first Hornet touchdown midway through the second quarter and Ed Murray kicked the convert. Murray later kicked a 20 yard field goal before Brian Bellis scored the only Cowichan major with four minutes left to play. Ross McCauley kicked the convert.

In Island Bantam League games at Cedar Hill Park, Oak Bay Invaders trampled Saanich Vampires 43-6 and Cowichan Chiefs blasted Juan de Fuca Tigers 45-6.

OAK BAY (43) — Craig Bentley, two touchdowns; Scott Adams, touchdown and safety; Rich Hill, touchdown, four converts and single; Bern Kidd, touchdown; John Mace, touchdown. SAANICH (6) — Lance Mitchell, touchdown.

COWICHAN (45) — Tom Nielson, four touchdowns, safety and convert; Brian Branting, touchdown; Gary Kirkpatrick, touchdown; other touchdown scorer not turned in. JUAN DE FUCA (6) — Dave Ryland, touchdown.

Giacomin Returns A Tearful Hero

By The Canadian Press

Ed Giacomin returned to Madison Square Garden in style Sunday night.

Wearing a visitors' uniform for the first time after 11 seasons as goaltender for New York Rangers, he listened with tears in his eyes to a thunderous ovation that lasted for three minutes.

Then he kicked out 42 shots to help his new employers, Detroit Red Wings, beat the Rangers 6-4 in a National Hockey League game.

Gilles Villemure, the other Ranger goalie discarded by general manager Emile Francis last week, also came up a winner Sunday night.

Villemure stopped 26 Vancouver shots in his first start for Chicago as the Black Hawks dropped the Canucks 6-1.

In Sunday's other games, Philadelphia Flyers humiliated Kansas City Scouts 10-0, Buffalo Sabres trimmed Pittsburgh Penguins 7-2 and Boston Bruins blanked California Seals 5-0.

On Saturday, Philadelphia walloped Boston 8-1, Minnesota North Stars stopped Pittsburgh 7-3, Montreal Canadians blanked the Rangers 4-0, Chicago topped Detroit 3-1, Toronto Maple Leafs shut out Kansas City 3-0, Lost Angeles Kings topped Atlanta Flames 3-1 and Vancouver and St. Louis Blues tied 3-3.

John Davidson, the goalie Francis decided to keep, was the loser in both of the Rangers' weekend games. New York outshot Montreal 38-29 Saturday and had a 46-30 edge over Detroit Sunday night. To add to Francis' woes, last week's third diserd, Derek Sanderson, scored his second goal for the Blues Saturday night to help them salvage a tie.

The Rangers got defenceman Doug Jarrett for Villemure, a draft choice for Sanderson and the $30,000 waiver price for Giacomin.

Bill Hogaboam scored two goals, both in the first period, and Nick Libett, Danny Grants, Barry Salovaara and Dan Maloney once each for the Wings.

Villemure, who had been in the Ranger organization since 1962-63 and had four full seasons with the team, helped the Hawks to continue their home-ice domination of the Canucks.

The Hawks have won 13 games, lost one and tied two against the Canucks at Chicago.

Chicago's attack was led by Darcy Rota, who collected a goal and three assists, and J. P. Bordeleau, who scored two goals.

Bobby Clarke, Orest Kindrachuk and Mel Bridgman each scored two goals for the Flyers, who turned the game into a runaway with four goals in less than four minutes in the second period. Bridgman, a Victoria Cougar graduate, also had an assist Sunday to go with a goal and assist in Saturday's game.

WHA Studies Brutality Claim

Times News Services

A World Hockey Association official is investigating an Indianapolis Racers' claim that one of their players suffered a broken nose because of a "vicious and brutal" attack.

Bob Frampton, supervisor of WHA referees, viewed video tapes of a game in which Michel Dubois was injured after a fight with Calgary Cowboys' Rick Jodzio. Frampton would not discuss the incident before the case is studied by otherr WHA officials.

Indianapolis general manager Jim Brownitt asked for the investigation, claiming Jodzio cross-checked Dubois and then attacked the Racer from behind.

Browitt said such attacks "seriously jeopardize the future of hockey." He feels a suspension of Jodzio is necessary "to prove you just can't do this kind of thing whenever you want to."

Meanwhile, the Racers, who have won only three games in 10 starts, shook up their lineup Sunday by farming out two players, including their leading scorer. Assigned to Mohawk Comets in the North American League were wingers Bobby Whitlock, the Racers' top scorer with 11 points, and popular Murray Heatley, a big producer last year who has yet to score a goal.

Boxers Win in Hurry

Undefeated London Boxing Club scored all its goals in the first 20 minutes of play and held on to defeat Gorge Molsons 4-3 in a Vancouver Island Soccer League premier division encounter Sunday at Topaz Park.

Boxers scored their first three goals at the expense of Molsons' netminter, Graham Lee, who started despite a back problem. Jim Marshall replaced Lee after Boxers ran up a 3-0 lead in the first 15 minutes and in turn gave way 15 minutes later to Brent Russell, who blanked Canada's senior champions the rest of the way.

In other weekend games, Oak Bay defeated Gorge United 4-1, Graham Hollingsworth's three goals paced Powell River Villa to a 5-1 victory over Duncan and Victoria West tied Nanaimo 3-3.

Peanuts for Player

Times News Services

Jack Nicklaus fired an even par 72 Sunday and won the $43,750 Australian Open golf championship by three strokes at Sydney.

Nicklaus started the final round tied with Australian Billy Dunk, but Dunk faded to a 77 and wound up tied for third. Nicklaus finished with 279 total, nine strokes below par, for the 72 holes in winning his fourth Australian Open crown.

Fellow American Bill Brask was second at 282 after a closing 73. Dunk, Australians David Graham and Ian Stanley and South African Gary Player tied for third at 284. Graham shot a final-round 70, Stanley had a 71 and Player a 73.

Player's game was interrupted on the 14th green when an anti-apartheid demonstrator threw a bag of peanuts on the green as Player was about to putt. The boarded yougn man was thrown to the ground and handcuffed by a detective and taken to the local police station where he was charged with offensive behaviour.

Player missed the putt. It was the second demonstration against the South African in the tournament. Six men and two women were arrested Saturday and charged with offensive behaviour after demonstrators shouted "Go home racist" to Player and waved anti-apartheid placards.

In the $100,000 Japan Classic at Osaka that is part of the regular U.S. Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour, American Karolyn Kartzman fired a two-under-par 75 Sunday to retain a one-stroke lead after two rounds.

Argos Sign Brightest of Suns

Toronto Argonauts, knocked out of the Eastern Football Conference playoff picture during the weekend, are expecting to have a more devastating attack next season.

Anthony Davis, the brilliant running back who led the defunct World Football League in scoring, rushing and pass receiving, was signed by the Argonauts today after legally becoming a free agent Sunday.

The 23-year-old, former all-American with the University of Southern California will receive $1 million over five years.

Davis's contract with Southern California Sun made him a free agent when the Sun failed to play two scheduled games in a row. The second of those games was Sunday.

He was No. 2 draft pick of

New York Jets of the National Football League but the Jets could not talk to Davis because of a ruling by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, who ordered teams in his league not to sign WFL players.

The Toronto team has been negotiating with Davis since shorty after the WFL folded. He visited Toronto with his agent Oct. 14 and 15, meeting with Argo officials and watching a CFL game.

APPLE DOWDY took command at once, opened a long lead down the backstretch, but was fully extended to defeat THE ARYAN. The latter rallied from between rivals leaving the backstretch, loomed a threat in the upper stretch, but could not overtake APPLE DOWDY. SIS BOOM raced from just off the rail and gained ground in the stretch. TERRA VELOCE was through shortly after a half-mile. MUFF'S PICK was only prominent in the opening quarter. Start good, won driving.

COUNTRY WINE set the pace from just off the rail and turned back FLEET MARCO under strong urging. The latter saved ground, challenged for the lead from the inside of COUNTRY WINE leaving the backstretch, but could not overtake that one. ABLAKH raced without apparent mishaps. HERMINE'S PRINCE was wide on the first turn, and had nothing when called on for the real test. TAANAS PRIDE saved ground to no avail. MISTY ISLAND raced wide. LANGLEY'S IMP was excused by the stewards after unseating her rider and running off during the post parade and all wagers involving her were refunded. Start good, won driving.

WIN A SHOT raced to the outside, entered serious contention on the stretch turn and proved best in a hard drive. HARD CHOICE saved ground early, moved to the outside of SHELWOOD for the stretch run and just failed from between rivals. SHELWOOD set the pace from just off the rail, entered the lane with a slight advantage, but was not good enough. NEW PRIDE had speed, but could not keep up in the late stages. DR. G. G. MAC had no visible excuse. CARELESS CAT began to weaken leaving the stretch turn. Start good, won driving.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Pollux-Clem's Ex, by Clem. Owner: Raceland Stable. Trainer: D. Forster.

JOHNNY TWO DANCE saved ground, went to the front from the inside of COSTARULE midway on the stretch turn and won under steady urging. COSTARULE set the early pace from just off the rail, could not cope with JOHNNY TWO DANCE, but was easily the second best. KIMS SHADOW saved ground to no avail. TOUGH MAGIC had speed, was wide on the stretch turn and weakened through the stretch. LITE WHITENIN ducked out slightly at the start. JANDREW was outrun. Start good, won driving.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Charmer II-Ashwood, by Arrog. Owner: C. Wuschke and K. Schmidt. Trainer: W. Isbister.

CHARMERS SYN, unhurried early, commenced his bid shortly before leaving the backstretch, gained the advantage from the outside of AIRDRIE BOB on the stretch turn and proved best in a hard drive. An objection lodged against the winner by the rider of AIRDRIE BOB alleging interference leaving the stretch turn, was not allowed. AIRDRIE BOB had speed throughout and just failed. BUM MONEY was without early speed, CRYSTAL COMET had early speed, was in tight on the second turn and could not keep up after seven furlongs. NOACCEPTION saved ground much of the way and had no apparent mishaps. TREASURE MILL raced wide early and was through after seven furlongs. SCOTTISH CRYSTAL showed little. CHIEF EXPORTER was through after six furlongs. Start good, won driving.

Winner: ch c, by Mr. Consistency-Nevada A. M., by Jet Pilot. Owner: R. J. Bennett. Trainer: R. G. Anderson.

AIR FLYER, opened a wide early advantage, raced out from the rail, lost command to CHOYA leaving the backstretch, regained the lead leaving the stretch turn and drew clear under steady urging. SEA JAY, unhurried early, rallied from the outside around the stretch turn and outfinished CHOYA for the place. The latter had speed, gained the lead from the inside of AIR FLYER leaving the backstretch, but had little left when called on for the real test. GLENLYON MAC was never dangerous. BIG MIDGET had no apparent mishaps. CRAIGDINA had only a mild rally down the backstretch. Start good, won driving.

1079 EIGHTH RACE — Claiming ($2000). Three-year-olds and upward which have not won two races in 1975. Purse $800. 1 MILE 70 YDS.

SAANICH SPREE set the pace under fine handling, and increased his advantage in the stretch under urging. AUSTIN TAYSHUSH saved ground, loomed a threat leaving the backstretch, but could not stay with the top one. PACIFIC RIM had speed, but gradually weakened. REGAL LEO was always outrun. VANCOUVER D and BEAU BUNNIE were through after six furlongs. Start good, won driving.

Attendance: 3262. Total mutuel handle: $289,667.

SOCCER VIKINGS EARN THEIR WAY INTO FINALS

If there was any doubt about UVic Vikings' right to be in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union soccer championships this weekend at Centennial Stadium, they were dispelled Saturday in Edmonton.

Vikings won the Canada West title with a 4-0 shutout over Saskatchewan Huskies and will represent their conference in the five-team national finals.

UVic, which would have played in the tournament as the host team anyway, now must win only two matches for the Canadian crown. The Vikings play the Atlantic University Athletic Association champion in the first round Friday at 3:30 p.m. and if they win, they go directly to the final Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Friday's other opener pits Manitoba Bisons, Great Plans Conference champs, against the Ontario conference winner at 2 p.m. The winner of that one meets Concordia, a 5-1 winner over Laval in Montreal for the Quebec title, Saturday at 2:30 p.m. at Centennial for the other berth in Sunday's final, also at 2:30.

Vikings finished with a 3-0 won-lost record in the Canada West tournament while Alberta Golden Bears, 2-0 winners over UBC Thunderbirds, were second at 2-1. UBC was third at 1-2 followed by Saskatchewan, 0-3.

The title was the first event in CWUAA soccer for the Vikings, who got first-half goals from Danny Lomas and Brian Barraclough and another when a Saskatchtwan defender put the ball into his own net. Vic Escude scored 20 minutes into the second half before Vikings concentrated on defence to protect goalkeeper Mike Armstrong's shutout.

A Formful Day at Track

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

"Running to form" is a key phrase in the thoroughbred business. It just helps everyone fell better — the horsemen, the handicappers and, most of all, the wagering public.

And Saturday at Sandown that was the story, along with another record day at the mutuels, a record crowd and the best day in the life of an apprentice jockey.

Of the eight races, six were decided by less than a length, and five by the photo-finish camera. Four of the public betting picks got down in front and, in the other four races, the favorite ran second. Things like that don't usually happen at a race track and, of course, that made for long lines at the payoff wickets.

The crowd, an announced 5,262 — but there obviously were more than that — poured $289,667 through the mutuels, the most ever at a Victoria meeting; and in only eight races. By comparison, a week ago Saturday the handle was $276,009 for nine races. The 10-day total now is $1,678,215, far beyond the fondest expectations of the Capital City Turf Club, which is operating the meeting and already talking about next season.

The jockey who reached his personal zenith was apprentice Craig Miller. He rode four winners, three in succession. He started on Win A Shot, who got away at 7-1 and paid $16.60 in the third. He scored on Solar Drive for the longest price of the day, $23.60, in the fourth. He then came right back in the fifth on the favorite, Johnny Two Dance, for a three-quarter-length victory over Costarule which paid $4.80.

To wind up the day's proceedings Miller piloted homne Saanich Spree ($5.40) in the eighth.

Air Flyer won the Sandown Derby with an impressive performance, shrugging off a challenge from Choya in the late going and pulling away to win by three lengths, the biggest winning margin of the program.

The weather was reasonable enough during the day, but overnight rains again caused parking problems. Still the fans made out. The early birds got the choice parking spots, others parked on the roadway around the park and even others left their cars in Sidney and took taxis to the track. Race forms and programs were sold out early, the concessions were taxed to the limit, and mutuels manager Doug Mitten said the handle might have even been higher if one horse hadn't been a track scratch.

SOCCER PLAYOFFS TONIGHT

Reynolds Roadrunners, unbeaten and the team with the glossiest defensive record, and Spectrum, a squad with the dynamic attack, carry the favorite's roles.

But tonight's Greater Victoria High School Soccer League semi-final matches at Royal Athletic Park are sudden-death affairs, and that should be enough to instill championship hopes at Oak Bay and Mt. Douglas. Anything can happen in a one-game affair.

Reynolds faces Oak Bay at 6:30 and Spectrum plays Mt. Doug at 8:30. Winners of the sudden-death encounters advance to the district championship game, Friday at Royal Athletic Park.

'Best Game' Gives Oak Bay a Crown

SALMON ARM — Oak Bay came up with what coach Gill Hawkins described as "our best game of the tournament" to overwhelm Burnaby South 3-0 Saturday and win the B.C. high school girls' field hockey championship.

Tht victory capped a brilliant tournament for the champions, who swept through six games undefeated, scoring 21 goals and allowing none. The defence of goaltender Joan Merston and fullbacks Heather Docherty and Nancy Foster was the key to the six shutouts.

The championship ended a three-year quest by Oak Bay. Prior to this season, the team had won the Greater Victoria title twice and the Island crown once but fell short of expectations in the B.C. tournament.

Oak Bay wasted no time against Burnaby South, leftwinger Sue Taylor scoring at six minutes. Joan Carruthers, leading scorer in the tournament with 10 goals, made it 2-0 by half time and Miss Taylor added the other goal in the second half.

Oak Bay reached the finals by beating Rutland 1-0 on Nancy Littley's goal. Burnaby South knocked off Salmon Arm 2-1 in the other semi-final.

Other members of the Oak Bay team are Bev Sealey, Ann Wallace, Sherri Sudlow, Brenda Young, Mary Cavin, Marcia Monaghan and Kathy Cliff.

Two other Victoria schools, Spectrum and Mt. Douglas, finished in the top 10 of the 16-team tournament. Spectrum finished fifth after beating Vancouver Tech 1-0 while Mount Doug was eighth after a 2-1 loss to Kelowna.

Grads Beat Bays

Oak Bay High School Grads downed this season's Bays 69-56 Saturday in the annual grad basketball game at Oak Bay.

Dave Kirzinger, the 1974 most valuable player in the B.C. high school tournament, scored 22 points for the Grads while Larry Dalziel, an all-star last year, counted 20. Dave Richmond scored 14 points, Craig Higgins 11 and Steve Leung 10 for the Bays.

Alberta Runners Upset UBC

EDMONTON — University of Alberta won the Canada West men's cross-couptry championship Saturday and will represent the conference in the Canadian Intercollegiate finals this Saturday at the University of Victoria.

The national finals start at 2 p.m. outside Victoria's Centennial Stadium and end in the stadium about 2:30.

Competing in seven-degree temperatures and several inches of wet snow, Alberta upset University of British Columbia for the CWUAA title.

UBC won the women's championship with UVic, led by Sharon Young, placing second.

The UVic men were fifth.

All four members of the Alberta team and the first four finishers in the men's race earned berths in the CIAU run. Lyall Kushniak of Alberta won the six-mile race in 29:42.8 followed by Chris White of UBC in 29:57 and John Wheeler of Victoria, a UBC student, who was third.

Saskatchewan's Mickey Graham was fourth to earn the final berth in the nationals. Tom Griffin finished ninth for the best UVic showing. Other UVic finishers were Brian Blamey, 10th, Jim Thorne, 21st, Larry Wheeler, 24th, and Fraser Syme, 29th.

The 2½-mile women's race went to Sheila Currie of UBC while Miss Young finished sixth. Other UVic placings were Ulla Hansen, eighth, Karen Egger, 13th, Anita Sobon, 17th, and Jill McLeod, 21st.

UVic Wins Pair

Lorne Dakin, counting 10 of his 12 points late in the second half, rallied University of Victoria Vikings to a 71-64 basketball victory over UVic Grads Saturday night at the McKinnon Gym.

UVic Vikettes also defeated the Grads 61-44 in the women's game.

Jim Duddridge paced Vikings with 13 points and he and Dakin each grabbed nine rebounds. Tom Hatcher paced the Grads with 22 points while Corky Jossul added 16.

Vikettes used a balanced attack to erase a six-point deficit at halftime. Edna Ritchie ed the winners with nine points while Lorna McHattie, Cathy Auburn, Theresa Marchin and Marg Mainwaring each scored eight. Mary Coutts led the Grads with 20 points.

Collins Hits Payload

As usual, the trophy table at the 25th annual Vancouver Island Track Racing Association awards banquet was loaded with enough silver to rival Fort Knox, but stock car driver Bob Collins did his best to clear it.

Collins walked away with two of the three major awards handed out at the Bay Street Armories Saturday night. He was voted river of the year by his rivals and took the Dick Willoughby Sportsmanship Trophy, voted by the VITRA general membership. Willoughby, a stock car driver at Western Speedway, was killed in a traffic accident in 1957.

The third major award, member of the year, went to Dave Quaife, head safety man who has inspected cars for several years.

Mechanic of the year is Harvey Chippet, chief wrencher for Gary Kershaw's 1969 Chevelle. Chipper has been chief mechanic for Kershaw for several years, including 1974 when Kershaw won 16 main events, and this year when he took eight feature races.

Rookie of the year in the super-stock division is Orton Ker, 26, who was fourth in driver points with 755. He drove a 1969 Ford Torino this year.

Claimer division rookie of the year is 16-year-old Billy Hitchcox, who was third in claimer driving points with 1,066.

Kershaw took the Corby Cup again for most main event wins and also won the most pupular driver award, ending Rick O'Dell's five-year hold on the trophy.

OLD MOVIES AND BEER...

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—In these days of inflation, the dollar-admission charge for a double feature, a cartoon — Captain Marvel serial episode, 10-cent popcorn and a chance to sit and drink cold draft beer is packing them in here at two old movie theatres.

"Crowds came the first night last spring and have not let up.

"There are some one-dollar movie houses around the country, but I don't know of anybody who serves beer," said John Staples, one of three partners — all novices in the theatre business—who dreamed up the idea while playing tennis one day.

They refurbished an old neighborhood movie house and made no bones about cashing in the nostalgia craze.

"We wanted to capture the era of The Sting, the 1930s," said Arthur Ray, lawyer and partner in the venture.

Ray said with 400 people plunking down their dollars, then sitting back to drink mugs of beer at 75 cents and much on ham-on-rye sandwiches, the partners are making money.

Old West L'Amour's Great Love

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — The world's all-time best selling author of western novels does not even think there should be such a category of books.

"It's ridiculous," grumbles Louis L'Amour. "When the action takes place east of the Mississippi, they call it a historical novel. When it takes place in the West, it's a Western. There's no sense to it. It's just snobbery by the critics.

With more than 60 books of his books in print, not to mention 400 short stories, an estimated 50 million books by L'Amour have been sold. Of those, 42 million have been published by Bantam and L'Amour now has moved ahead of John Steinbeck as that firm's all-time best-selling author.

He long ago surpassed his top rival, Zane Grey, whose sales have totalled in the 35 million range.

Thirty-three of L'Amour's books have been made into films, including Hondo, Catlow, Heller in Pink Tights, A Man Called Noon," and Shalako.

The key to L'Amour's success probably is his meticulous historical research that makes every detail of the frontier lives he writes about ring true.

In his latest book, The Man from the Broken Hills, hero Milo Talon impresses ex-Confederate Major Timerly by asking for either Boal or rainwater" madeira. L'Amour said he checked old wine lists in Kansas City and Virgina City to learn what brands a man with Talon's background would have preferred.

L'Amour, a stocky man in his 60s, tries not to show his ire over his relative obscurity with the critics who make up the nation's literary establishment.

But sometimes it shows through.

"We live in a world where a man doesn't like his wife and is carrying on with some other woman and this story is done over and over again and that is supposed to be important writing. Whereas the opening up of half of our whole United States is not supposed to be important. It's absurd."

But while the critics make little mention of him, his readers are devoted to him.

He is also amazed to find that the young men and women of the counter-culture who are settling communes in the wilds are fans of his works.

L'Amour is a North Dakota native who was a high school dropout, former ranch hand, professional boxer, seaman and longshoreman. He said he has talked to "20 or 30 old gunfighters" and noted sadly that he will be the last of the Western writers who had personal talks with frontier dwellers.

Mastectomy Fashion Show

The mastectomy rehabilitation program sponsored by the Canadian Cancer Society will present a display of breast forms and swimwear each month at Victoria's two general hospitals.

Eleanor Smith, Victoria area co-chairman for the program, said the display at Victoria General Hospital will be Nov. 5 in the board room, from noon to 3 p.m. At Royal Jubilee, the display will be Nov. 18, in the staff lounge at the Eric Martin Institute from 6 to 8 p.m.

Gov't Controls Tight: Pepin

OTTAWA (CP)—The anti-inflation review board may not have as much independence as the former food prices review board, says Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the new board.

He says the food prices board was much more marginal to the operation of government than the new board, which will be "part of a much more global operation of the government against inflation . . ."

However, he said he personally feels it would be in the interests of the government, the people and the board to have a "certain independence of views from the government."

"My own view at this time is that the board must have a good degree of independence from the government and must have the authority, the right to express strong views on why we have inflation, express strong views also as to the reform which is needed in some major Canadian institutions . . ."

Appearing on the CTV program Question Period, Pepin, a former industry, trade and commerce minister, was asked about the effects of labor not supporting the government's wage and price restraint program.

"Well, this is where the reaction of the Canadians as a whole is of paramount importance," he said.

"If there is, and it appears that it is growing, . . . a strong desire on the part of Canadians as a whole, as a population, to make this thing work . . . it will have a snowballing effect on others who are less sympathetic to it at first glance."

MIAMI ON THE CHEAP

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada is planning an experimental, low-cost weekend night coach excursion fare linking Toronto and Montreal with Miami.

The service is scheduled to begin Jan. 2, subject to approval by Canadian and U.S. aviation authorities.

Basic return fare between Toronto and Miami will be $119 and between Montreal and Miami $133. An additional round-trip amount of $30 will be charged during peak periods of March 18-24 and April 14-20, Air Canada said.

The night coach excursion fare will apply for stays on a mnimum of eight says or a maximum of 60 days duration.

Air Canada said if the experiment is successful it may introduce the fares on some Canadian routes.

MPs Agree to Rush Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has struck a tentative agreement with opposition parties to pass a series of bills — some of them highly contentious—by Christmas.

Party House leaders already have set Dec. 19 as the target date for starting their Christmas recess and have negotiated a rough schedule of business to be disposed of in the meantime.

Included is the controversial anti-inflation bill, now under detailed study in committee after a stormy debate at second reading.

Also on the list, along with several minor bills, is legislation to overhaul the unemployment insurance program, reduce spiralling medical care costs and rubber stamp tax changes that took effect when the last budget was tabled in June.

Negotiations by House leaders are common in setting the Commons agenda but the talks on what should be cleared by Christmas have started earlier than usual.

"We all know there is a lot to be done," says Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin. "They (the government) are pretty far behind."

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party House leader, said there is no guarantee that the tentative agenda will be completed.

"It doesn't take much to throw these things off. One unexpected setback and that could be it. But this is what we're talking about."

The government is anxious to clear as much legislation as possible by Christmas. After MPs come back from their holiday break, they will face, among other things, another debate on the emotional issue of capital punishment.

The issue took months to resolve the last time and it could take even longer this time.

The last time, the government asked only for an extension of the partial capital punishment ban first implemented in 1967. This time it plans to bring in legislation calling for total abolition. Public opinion polls and many MPs oppose abolition.

Satellite Study Set for Seals

GUELPH (CP) — A University of Guelph scientist says Canadian biologists will study the harp seal near Resolute Bay with satellites and ultraviolet cameras.

Dr. Keith Ronald, dean of biological sciences, said a team from the university will track the animals to the Arctic sea — where scientists have never watched them before — from their breeding grounds in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Statistics collected on migration, biological and physiological conditions will be reduced to mathematical equations to produce a computer model on the seals' habits, he said.

A new ultraviolet-photography technique, developed by team-member D. M. Lavigne, will be used to study the white baby seals, Dr. Roanld said.

In the past, the pups would not photograph against a background of white ice and snow.

The scientists hope to use computer modelling on polar bears and reindeer in a later study. The three-year project is financed by a $165,000 grant from the Donner Canadian Foundation.

Prime Mushroom Time

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

They have intriguing names like Shaggy Mane and Inky Cap, not to mention curious shapes and varied hues. Some are truly tasty and others will kill you quickly.

It's mushroom time in the rain again and in Greater Victoria, with close to 400 kinds of them, it's prime pickings.

But the man who for years helped pickers identify the edible ones, Dr. Adam Szczawinski, curator of botany at the Provincial Museum, has retired.

Happily, another expert in the government service is ready to help people avoid poisoning themselves. He is Dr. Al Funk, a mycologist at the Pacific Forest Research Centre on Burnside near the Trans-Canada Highway.

Mycology is the study of fungi, which range from microscopic size to 40-pound chunks, and Dr. Funk's regular work is with the micro-fungi which attack trees. Mushrooms are fungi.

Unfortunately, there is no rule of thumb for separating lethal from edible mushrooms, he says. Example: poisonous mushrooms all have white gills, but so do some of the edible ones.

Shaggy Manes and Inky Caps are among the edible group, along with puffballs and sulfur fungi, also known as Chicken of the Woods. But again there are exceptions. Some people get violently ill if they eat Inky Caps before or after taking liquor.

Deadliest of the mushrooms are those in the Amanita group and while some are quite distinctive, the old adage that any mushrooms which peel can be eaten simply isn't true. Some Amanitas peel quite readily, Funk notes.

Again, most Amanitas have warts — but not all.

Best way to learn the safe ones is to be introduced to them by someone who knows what he's talking about. There are a couple of highly qualified amateurs around, he said.

The mushrooms you buy in the store are generally a domesticated form of the common meadow mushroom.

Funk says growing mushrooms in a home garden requires quite stringent conditions in which a compost of well-fermented horse manure is used, for the most part.

"I've never tried it myself and I only know of failures."

If there is a single rule to mushroom picking, he suggests that it's "when in doubt — don't eat it."

Those in doubt can bring the mushrooms puzzling them to his office at the centre "and we'll be glad to check them out."

But does the mushroom man like mushrooms as food?

"I try at least one or two species a week on myself and family," he said, "and I know what I'm doing."

A Place to Get Better: One View of Hospitals

Hospital rooms should be panelled in knotty pine with picture windows that look to the outside world. There should be bright prints upon the walls, a cheery fireplace ablaze in one corner. There should be a buzzer beside the patient's bed to summon room service and a menu including Lobster Thermidore. There should be . . .

What's that, you say? Oh, I know that the crying need for the day is more hospital beds, that there's hardly a hospital in our part of the world that hasn't had to use its corridors because the rooms are full. I know that there are long waiting lists for minor operations because there's no place to put the patient.

But yesterday I found myself looking beyond the immediate future and my hope is that the healers may be thinking along the same lines. I see no reason why we shouldn't dream of hospital rooms that will give humanity a fighting chance for survival instead of challenging them to get out alive.

A nurse was coming out of the room where my father-in-law, Ralph, has been a patient. Ralph is 89 years of age and in remarkable shape for his vintage. It is, in fact, the first time he has been hospitalized in his long life and his doctor assures me he'll be out in a few days. The nurse affirmed this optimistic diagnosis when I asked her how he was coming along.

"He shows every sign of complete recovery," she grinned. "He's complaining about everything."

A mere glance was enough to confirm this happy verdict since Ralph was clearly his old irascible self and when I told him what the nurse had said he obviously considered it a compliment.

"She's a fine girl," he said, "but she knows I will be delighted to leave. The trouble with hospitals is that you could put a well man in this bed and he'd instantly feel sick. Everything — but everything! — is a reminder that you're ill. Why, the very echoes of the place, the whole cockeyed routine seem contrived to murder your morale. The very smell of the place is an invitation to hypochandria."

Maybe so, I said, but it was clear that hospital had done him a whole lot of good. I hadn't seen him looking so rested in a long time.

"Rested? Are you kidding?" Ralph countered. "Why, I haven't had this sort of routine since the British Army. They awaken you at the crack of dawn for breakfast. They wait out in the hall until you're just about to sneak a nap. Then they dart in and stick a thermometer in your mouth. Then they go out and you try to sleep again. Just when you think there's a chance they dart in again and rip all the bed clothes from under you." He looked at me furtively. "I wonder how many people die in hospitals from enforced insomnia. And the meals!"

"Not good?"

"Wholesome — oh, very wholesome," Ralph said bitterly. "But any fool knows that a man wants something a little special when he's sick. Ask any mother. Ask your wife. But here — why, it's still before noon when they bring you a great heaping plate of roast beef and mashed potatoes and — God help us! — gravy!"

So what, I asked Ralph, would be his idea of a hospital, presuming, of course, that there were none of the shortages of space and staff.

"First of all," said Ralph, "rooms that would be pleasant and cheerful to live in. A patient who's going to spend more than 24 hours on his back should have a big, deep, comfortable double bed instead of this patented padded slab. And if he wants to sleep he should sleep and not have one eye on the door waiting for those oh-so punctual visits.

"He should be pampered in his appetite. Why not? You aren't sick every day in your life. Why, there's one old guy down the hall here, practically on his last legs. He just looks at those mashed potatoes and that gravy and turns away. That's nourishment? What that fellow needs is the choice of a first-class menu. As it is, he's perishing from malnutrition."

"Still," I pointed out, "as I said, you never looked better."

"I shouldn't kick," Ralph agreed grudgingly. "They do a marvellous job when you consider their problems. The nurses, particularly, are wonderful. But, mark my words, there's going to come a day when the medicine men will realize that they need a whole new concept of treating the sick and particularly in the long siege of convalescence. I'm feeling just ornery enough to do a little pioneering."

"Well," I said, "I hear you'll be coming home in a day or two."

The nurse had come back to the room, bearing a thermometer. Ralph took it without complaining. He favored the nurse with a conspirital wink.

"I just hope I don't miss it," he said as I made my exit.

Calvert Crescent Closure Expected

It is also expected that neighbors living close to the park will object to the closure.

On Saturday morning, Mayor Brian Smith gave more than 30 residents a tour of the area, accompanied by municipal engineer Geoffrey White.

Last spring, Dr. E. H. W. Elkington donated four lots to bring the park at Island Road in south Oak Bay to six acres.

The residents signed a petition, thanking Elkington for his gesture to help obtain the park, purchased with the aid of a $110,000 provincial grant.

Council announced Oct. 9 that the road allowance will be part of .28 acres Elkinton will receive as a land swap for the four lots he's donated.

Residents are concerned that an alternate route will deprive some nearby houses of privacy.

YOUTH GUILTY OF BREAK-IN

A 17-year-old Victoria youth will be held in custody for sentence Nov. 14 following a plea of guilty to break-in, attempted break-in and possession of housebreaking instruments.

David Alexander Bruce, 1126 Oxford, appeared in provincial court today after an early morning incident at Fairfield Jewellery, 313 Cook.

Police found the instruments, including glass-cutter, hammer and tape, when checking his residence regarding an Oct. 14 theft at the same store when watches, a lighter and other items had been stolen.

Police arrested him early this morning while he was cutting window glass at the rear of the store.

He was ordered held in custody when Judge William Ostler said: "He may be only 17, but he's shown a considerable degree of sophistication."

Bruce's defence counsel Richard Anthony told Ostler the youth likely got his ideas from television.

Some Won't Quit

Some businesses, it seems, just never know when to quit.

While bankruptcy proceedings and possible fraud investigations continue in B.C. in connection with the Quit Centre for the Control of Smoking, which closed suddenly 10 weeks ago, an operation under the same name is attempting to open for business in Winnipeg.

Bill Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau, said he received the informatin last week in a telephone call from Winnipeg radio station CJOB.

Tindall said the station had been approached by an advertising agency to handle ads for a Quit Centre opening in the city, but someone at the station had received an anonymous telephone call suggesting they check the status of B.C. operations under that name.

At first, Tindall admitted, he was unsure whether "it was the same outfit" as the one which had left money owing to about 400 Vancouver Island residents who had prepaid for service, as well as back salary owing to staff members here.

But such doubts were dispelled because the advertising agency had included in its kit sent to the radio station clipping from B.C. newspapers, "showing how successful their operations had been in B.C." Among the cities mentioned in the cuttings was Duncan.

'Unfit' Label For Pet Food

All frozen pet food sold in the province will have to be labelled "not fit for human consumption.",

A cabinet order made public today also stipulates that no meat sold for pet food should contain bacteria capable of causing diseases in humans.

Provincial epidemiologist A. A. Larsen in Victoria today explained the government has no statistical evidence of pensioners and others eating pet food but has had some unofficial reports indicating this happening in some parts of the province.

Canned pet food should be safe for human consumption, he said, because it has been heat treated but there could be some danger in frozen pet meat.

Mrs. Cynthia Stringfellow, counsellor for Victoria's 5,000-member Silver Threads, said today she hasn't heard of any pensioners buying frozen pet food for consumption.

"I'm sure it's done over the province but I haven't heard of it among our members," said Mrs. Stringfellow. "This is not to say they haven't done so."

Another spokesman for the Victoria welfare office of the Human Resources department also said there were no formal reports of humans eating pet food but added:

"I suspect it's one of those things we know about but don't acknowledge."

Stores which prepare their own frozen pet food from meat scraps should be safe, said Larsen, because the meat scraps are from government-inspected products.

But other frozen pet meat is obtained from what is known in the trade as "dealers, diers and downers" — animals who have died or are on the point of death.

Larsen cited a case in B.C. where a girl contracted a serious illness which was difficult to diagnose until it was discovered her pets had the same illness.

Organisms causing the illness were discovered in the pet food which was made from dead hens.

So Larsen said besides warning people not to eat the frozen food cabinet decided to ensure food itself is not carrying organisms which can cause disease, since those diseases could be passed from animals to humans.

B.C. hopes the federal government will take some action in the area of pet food control and Larsen said discussions have been held on the matter.

If frozen pet food were heat treated in the same way canned pet food, it should be safe, said Larsen.

"It could still be terrible garbage but it wouldn't make people sick," he said.

George Phillion, assistant regional director of the department said he would be concerned to hear of instances — assistance cases or not — where pet food was being used to balance nutrition.

"We have the Meals on Wheels program to rely on in cases where someone is unable to cook . . . and we are mutually interested in expanding this service further to areas where a poper diet is lacking," said Phillion.

Public Decides On Milk Pouch

Appearance of milk-in-a-pouch on Victoria store shelves will depend upon public acceptance of the innovation which one dairy began offering in home deliveries recently.

Silverwood Dairies manager Ivor Fuller said quart-size plastic pouches have not yet been offered to all home delivery customers and will not be introduced in stores until they want it, based on buyer demand.

"This is here if you like it,' we'll say, and leave it to them if they want to try it," Fuller said.

The idea of milk in a bag is about 10 years old in eastern Canada and has been accepted in some western cities, Edmonton for one.

Fuller said there are some production advantages and definite customer advantages, for example easy refrigerator storage where pouches can be "stacked like cordwood" on narrow shelves. He said milk can be frozen in the bag for lengthier storage if desired.

Householders are offered a re-usable plastic jug into which the pouch fits for pouring once the corner has been snipped off.

The empty pouch itself is easier to dispose of than a cardboard carton and requires no washing as do returnable plastic milk bottles. Pouches can be burned with waste-paper or washed to use for freezer bags.

Until there is wide distribution of bagged milk there is no cost advantage to dairies, Fuller indicated.

Coast Guard Plans Beacons At Shawnigan

The Canadian coast guard intends to place navigation beacons on Shawnigan Lake and also install lighted navigation aids in the popular Lake and also install lighted cruising waters of Desolation Sound.

Larry Slaght, district marine manager in Victoria, made the announcement at the annual awards dinner of the Vancouver Island division of the Navy League of Cnada, held at the Travelodge in Nanaimo Saturday evening.

Slaght told the 150 at the dinner that the Shawnigan Lake beacons will be installed in 1976 and the Desolation Sound aids will go into effect in 1976-1977.

He said an increasing number of Royal Canadian Sea Cadets are choosing the Canadian coast guard as a career.

National Navy League president Jack Koyl of Victoria reported that on a visit to the coast guard's officer training college in Sydney, N.S. he had found 37 per cent of the students were former sea cadets.

"There are also two ex-Navy League Wrenettes at the college," Koyl said. "One is training to be a deck officer and the other, an engineer."

Division president Gerry Boshop of Victoria announced that the provincial government's B.C. Steamship Co. has employed sea cadets aboard the Princess Marguerite for two-week periods during the summer season.

Sea cadets will be carried aboard the Princess Marguerite in 1976 and arrangements are being made to have them on the government's newest ferry, the Prince Henry.

CPO Donald Warren of Saanich's Admiral Budge corps was awarded the trophy for the best sea cadet in B.C. and a watch from the Strathcona Trust, which also donated $100 to the corps for training equipment.

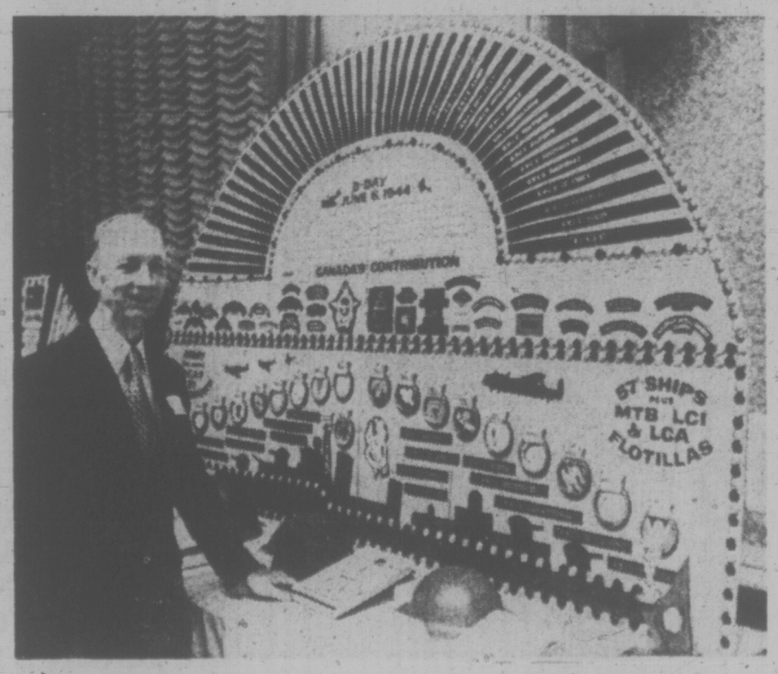
The Thorton Memorial Trophy for the corps providing the best program of sailing, survival and other outdoor activities went to the Port Augusta corps of Comox.

The general proficiency award for wrenette corps was won by the Denis W. Brown corps of Campbell River while the award for best Navy League cadet corps went to Victoria's Admiral Rayner corps. Port Alberni's E. L. Hammer corps was presented with the trophy for most improved Navy League cadet corps.

Former Nanaimo sea cadet George Horel was presented with a Navy League scholarship. Horel is studying engineering at the University of British Columbia.

Mrs. Della Foy of Port Alberni received an honor certificate and testimonials were presented to Lieut. Alfred Ball of Port Hardy; Lieut. Leon Landry, Sub.-Lt. Gerald Hayden and Lieut. Bernard McNicholl, all of Nanaimo; and Stan Gibbs and Mel Skinner of Victoria.

AT LEAST 1,000 visitors attended the 11th annual historical and antique arms show of the Vancouver Island Arms Collectors Association, held at the Empress Hotel on Saturday and Sunday. Wilf Falconer is seen here with his display of crests and insignia of Canadian troops involved in D-Day on June 6, 1944. The display won more awards than any other in the show, including best in show award and award for best collection of Canadiana.



Vic West Mayoralty Forum Set

Victoria's mayoralty and aldermanic candidates have been invited to address a public meeting Wednesday at the Victoria West elementary school.

Arranged by the Victoria West Community Association, the meeting was originally scheduled to discuss only the Neighborhood Improvement Program proposals for Vic West. But its scope was broadened to allow candidates to air their policies and answer questions.

Most controversial topic likely to surface is the proposed Vic West community centre to be built with NIP funds.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

Co-op Living Home Sought for Handicapped

The human resources department is expected to rule this month on a grant application from a local group to establish a "co-operative living home" for four handicapped people now confined to hospital.

The group, about 25 people who are either handicapped or interested in helping the handicapped, is forming a non-profit society, said Sachi Tamura, one of its members. They have been conducting workshops since June.

If the grant is approved, it will be used to renovate, furnish and subsidize the rent for a home where the four now in hospital will live.

Another supporter, Donna Pistill, said the four are now in institutions where they "exist" with many elderly patients.

"The right to decide their own life style is denied them now, with the result that institutionalization has nearly destroyed all initiative in them."

In a "co-operative living home," they would have the right and responsibility of making all the decisions concerning the running of their own household.

Tamaura said that in such a home the four, all in wheelchairs, would contribute part of their income toward the rent.

Three of the four proposed for the first home are in their twenties and one in her forties. Two are men and two women.

There are five co-operative living homes operating on the Lower Mainland and many others in Great Britain, Pistill said.

High Food Value Makes Squash Good Investment

By HILDA BEASTALL

Quantities of matured squash fruits pose a problem just now when storage space must be found, yet their food value is high enough to make them a splendid money saving investment for homemakers living in the city.

The storage of just one or two large hubbard types need be not problem. Keep them in a cool place in the house, and don't forget them.

Avoid bruising or damaging the skins. A temperature around 15 to 20 degs. C. is about right and the air should be dry. Most homes, whether apartments or houses, have such a place. A cool cupboard is fine if you remember that they are there.

These mature squash keep well until next February or so under ideal conditions, but the new user should aim for early new year as a latest date. Check the fruits often to see that no soft spots develop. If any are seen, cut them out and use the remaining good parts within a week or so.

Mould the film smoothly to the shape of the piece and store in a cooler place such as the vegetable bins in a refrigerator.

Mature, large zucchini squash have more vitamin A than when immature in summer, but top of the list are deep orange colored ones such as Baby Hubbard, regular Hubbard (both warted skins), Blue Hubbard (smooth skinned), Table Queen sometimes called Acorn, and Buttercup a flattish squash with all the seeds in one end. All have rich flavors when properly cooked. Boiled in a lot of water hey have nothing to recommend them.

Table Queen and Buttercup are smaller fruits to deal with, easier when small portions are needed about twice a week.

Team any of these squash with green and white vegetables to get the balance of vitamins—fresh green cabbage (Savoy in winter), brussels sprouts, cauliflower, sweet corn, potatoes, parsnips and mushrooms are good companions having iron, calcium, protein, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin to contribute as well as fairly high amounts of vitamin C in which winter squash is rather low.

The sprouts, cauliflower and mushrooms are among the higher priced foods when having to buy, but the others are more moderately priced. All are well worth buying because of their food values.

Now a few recipes for using mature squash, or winter squash as it may be called.

If you have none on hand, get some the next time you see the whole fruits displayed on roadside stands or in city produce markets.

SQUASH SOUP

1 cup diced squash
½ cup ripe tomatoes
1 small whole garlic clove
½ cup vegetable stock or water
½ cup diced mushrooms
1 Tbsp chopped parsley
1 cup skim milk from powder
½ tsp salt
1 tsp soft margarine
1 Tbsp brewer's yeast

Cook squash, tomato and garlic in vegetable stock for 15 minutes or until squash is fork tender. Add mushroom pieces (these can be stems and broken pieces) and parsley, simmer gently for 5 minutes, stirring.

Add milk slowly so as not to stop the simmering.

Then add salt, margarine and brewer's yeast just before serving. Stir together, taste for seasoning. Sprinkle with paprika.

Serves 2 or 3, with warmed homemade wheat buns and cheese.

BAKED SQUASH

4 halves or cut pieces squash
hot water
1 cup dry wholewheat crumbs
1 cup wheat germ
½ tsp salt
¼ cup oil or soft margarine
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 Tbsp chopped parsley
4 tomato slices if available
OR sprinkling of paprika

Place squash halves or pieces with cut slices down, side by side in shallow baking dish. Skins are left on uncut side. Have hot water about ½ inch deep. Cover with lid or tight foil and bake until almost tender in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for 30 minutes.

Take from oven; remove foil.

Turn cut side up, and fill each section of squash with mixture of crubms, wheat germ, oil, cheese, salt and parsley.

Return to oven without cover, at same temperature to brown the crumbs and finish cooking the squash. The juices are used in a gravy or a soup.

Serve with either a casserole of brown rice cooked in the oven, or a casserole of macaroni which will also cook in the oven.

Use covered dishes for either of these foods and have skimmed milk almost boiling when pouring over rice or macaroni. They will cook squash bakes. Remove the gently in the oven while the cover from rice or macaroni when the squash is first taken out. Season as desired, and let top become browned while fixing the quash and finishing its cooking.

As a last recipe in this squash group, Golden Omelet makes a fine complete lunch or a supper dish with other vegetables. Quick too.

GOLDEN OMELET

3 cups small-diced mature squash
1 Tbsp hot water
3 small eggs
2 Tbsp liquid skim milk
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese
¼ cup wheat germ
1 Tbsp brewer's yeast
1 Tbsp soft margarine
1 Tbsp chopped parsley

Peel and dice squash into ¼-inch pieces; put into frypan or skillet having a lid. Pour over the spoonful of hot water. Simmer, covered, until just fork tender about 12 minutes (according to kind).

Meanwhile, beat eggs with fork, add milk. Stir in cheese, wheat germ and brewer's yeast. Add soft margarine to pan and let melt.

Pour egg mixture all over squash which is in one layer in pan. Sprinkle wit parsley.

Divide into 3 or 4 portions, lift with spatula to heated plates.

With a green salad, fresh fruit and homemade wheat buns what more can one want? A cup of freshly percolated coffee, that's what . . .

My three squash recipes here are of the easiest. More complex and some quite elabrate ones will be found in the Zucchini Cookbook by Paula Simmons whic came into Victoria bookstores last fall.

Those who have it know that it deals with firm large zucchinis as well as young ones. Recipes range from breads, wedding cake, to fish, meat and vegetable dishes.

A bit of adjusting, and many will suit hubbard and other winter squash.

WHEELS

By MICHAEL LAMM

DEAR MIKE:

The speedometer in my 1972 Maverick clicks and the needle waves back and forth between about 30 and 60 mph. How big a deal is this to fix? —Clicky

DEAR CLICKY:

Not big. Usually the speedometer eable either needs lubrication or it's frayed. If it's frayed, you'll need to change it. You can probably handle either job yourself, because Maverick speedometers are easy to pull forward in the dash panel. Use graphite to lube the cable.

DEAR MIKE:

I have a 1973 Gremlin with 3-speed comumn stick. The Transmission sometimes is hard to shift into and out of second. Please advise.—Shifty.

DEAR SHIFTY:

Could be bad rubber washers in the linkage, improper adjustment of the shift rods, or bent rods.

DEAR MIKE:

The battery cables in my 1969 Valiant keep getting this white crud on them. I brush it off, but two months later it's back. Is there any permanent way to cure this?—Crud Fighter

DEAR FIGHTER:

Yes. Slather both posts with lard or petroleum jelly or axle grease next time you clean them. Be generous in your slathering so that air can't get to the metal. Then wrap the grease with plastic wrap.

DEAR MIKE:

Our 1972 Fury makes a faint pinging noise (engine ping) under light load but not under heavy acceleration. Is it something in the electronic ignition?—Pings

DEAR PINGS:

No, it's something in the vacuum advance. Apparently it's not retarding under light acceleration but it is under heavy acceleration. Check out the system on an ignition tester.

Teen Queen Taken

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will print my letter to warn other girls against mistaking the Miss U.S. Teen Pageant for the Miss Teenage America Pageant. I made that mistake.

I paid an entry fee of $75 and drove 260 miles from my home after being accepted as a Florida entry in the Miss U.S. Teen Pageant. I had to pay all my own expenses for an overnight trip, plus buy a special wardrobe.

The girl who won first prize got a $500 scholarship for a LOCAL college — a far cry from the $10,000, four-year scholarship for the college of her choice, which is what the winner of the Miss Teenage America Pageant gets.

Too late I discovered that I had entered a LOCAL Teen Queen contest, thinking it was the National Miss Teenage America Pageant!

After checking, I learned that any girl can enter the preliminaries of the Miss Teenage America Pageant in her home town, and it doesn't cost her one penny. And she doesn't have to be sponsored. She can enter as a candidate at large.

I have chalked up my mistake to experience, but you could do teenage girls a big favor by advising them to find out exactly what each pageant does or does not offer before they enter.—TAKEN

DEAR TAKEN: Consider it done! Yours is only one of many such complaints I've received.

Girls, beware!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 65-year-old widow, own my own home and have my 25-year-old son (the youngest) living with me. Joey has always been a good boy—truthful and a steady worker.

Another son said that Joey told him that he had a girl friend but that he didn't want me to know about her. I can't understand why. I've always encouraged Joey to find a nice girl. He's old enough to marry and makes a good salary.

Lately, Joey has started to come home at dawn. He says he's been working late, but I know he hasn't. Why should he lie to me?

I have four married children who have all brought their dates here for me to meet. What could be wrong? When I hint, Joey clams up.

Do you think he's ashamed of me? Or could he be ashamed of the girl? Please help me.—HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: Don't try to figure it out. If Joey's current relationship develops into anything serious, you'll know soon enough. Meanwhile, quit "hinting." Joey is old enough to live his own life. But there's no excuse for his lying.

'Perfect Gifts' at Village Crafts

By ELIZABETH FORBES

How would you like to step into a shop filled with handmade articles, any one of which would make an attractive gift?

Suppose you made several purchases in that shop. Wouldn't it give you a good feeling to know the money you spent belonged to a group of people who really deserve your encouragement and help.

The shop I'm talking about is the New Horizons Village Crafts, tucked into a small mall on Oak Bay Avenue, directly opposite Oak Bay Municipal Hall.

There you will find a wealth of articles made by physically and mentally handicapped persons living in rest homes, nursing homes and in their own homes in various parts of Victoria.

Village Crafts has only been in its present location a little over two years.

Before that, as I'm sure many will remember, outlet for these handmade articles was on the mezzanine floor of Miss Frith's Millinery and Fashions on Douglas Street.

Sponsored by the Canadian Mental Health Association and the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded, that mezzanine shop did a flourishing business.

So good, in fact, that when (after five or six years) the millinery and dress shop reached a point where it needed the mezzanine for expansion, it was decided an effort must be made to keep the project alive.

A tiny shop was found in the mall opposite Oak Bay Municipal Hall and with funding through a New Horizons grant, Village Crafts was in business.

Margaret Bates displays crafts

Almost immediately that shop proved too small and the project was quickly moved to bigger floor space next door, where it is now located.

Margaret Bates, manager of the shop says that she now has 219 active contributors regularly sending in handmade articles.

Among them are a number of senior citizens, living alone and with few relatives and friends.

"They love to work with their hands and in recent months we have offered them a place for their crafts with the others."

In the beginning, she says, all money received, with exception of 10 per cent for overhead, was given back to those who sent in work.

This spring however, when the New Horizons grant was not renewed "we had to re-organize", she says.

By that time business arrangements were in the hands of a board of 12 men and women, and through this board, it was again decided the project was too important to give up and a way must be found of keeping it going.

Letters were sent to every contributor telling them the 10 per cent overhead was being raised to 25 per cent, but as all stock was being priced a little higher they would lose nothing in the change.

With the new plan and an increase in the shop's popularity, it was soon realized there was need for an auxiliary with a corps of volunteers who would help in the shop as well as with auxiliary work.

Today that auxiliary, headed by Trudy Weins, includes the 12 board members and 36 volunteers.

It meets twice a week. Once in a pleasant back area of the craft shop where members make decorations for wedding cars on order.

Second meeting is at one or other of the members' homes where stuffed animals are being made for Christmas selling.

Materials for those animals have all been donated through a small notice placed in the shop window. Also donated through a window request, were a number of craft magazines that present those who contribute work, with new ideas.

Trudy Weins and Margaret Bates both emphasize that this is an outlet where you will find nothing but handcrafts made in British Columbia.

After a visit to the shop and a quick look around, I'm ready to back those statements, 100 per cent.

In the short time I was there I saw crocheted and knitted goods, objects made of driftwood and of shells and patchwork quilts that reminded me of my grandparents' pioneer home.

In one corner there were hanging flower pot holders made of macrame, room dividers in colorful wools and waste baskets created from egg cartons.

Packets of hand-made and embroidered tea towels, one for each day of the week, seemed a perfect gift idea, and if you wanted something really different, there is a bread basket actually made of bread dough, cooked to a delicate brown and then preserved with an acrylic wash. Also a serving of buns preserved in the same way.

Babies and children's wear, knitted Irish wool sweaters and knitted hats in new mod styles are all there. Some contributors in this section even make their own dyes and spin their own wools.

Umbrella holders of macrame too, and walking sticks fashioned from driftwood.

These are only a few of the many articles you'll find if you set aside an hour and make a leisurely tour of the Village Crafts shop.

Remember, if you do make purchases you are not only getting something a little different from the ordinary run of gifts, you are also assisting a group of people whom I have already said, definitely deserve your encouragement and your help.

WOMEN GIVING MEN A CHANCE

EXLINE, Iowa (UPI) — The six women who run city politics in this tiny Iowa community have decided it's time to give men a chance.

Mayor Jessmarie Steele, 79, said she and the five women who compose city council will retire from active politics.

Six men are running unopposed for the posts in Tuesday's municipal elections.

Mrs. Steele said she and three women were elected to the five-member council in 1969. They were re-elected in 1971 and two other women won seats. All six were re-elected two years ago.

"It was wonderful working with all gals, we all got along so well," Mrs. Steele said.

"You know they say women are hard to get along with but in all those years," she said. "We had unanimous votes on everything."

Win in Worst Way

By The Associated press

Bill Sharman was as blunt as he was relieved.

"I feel real good to win this game — as it is the worst game we've played this season," the Los Angeles Lakers coach confided Sunday night after his team nipped Atlanta Hawks 116-113 in overtime in a National Basketball Association game.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers scored 39 points and had 23 rebounds in the contest before fouling out with 2:03 remaining in overtime as Hawk centre Mike Sojourner scored a layup to narrow the gap to three points.

In Sunday's other NBA games, Houston Rockets topped Milwaukee Bucks 104-89 and Washington Bullets whipped Seatle SuperSonics, 94-85.

On Saturday, New York Knicks beat Philadelphia '76ers 110-98, Portland Trail Blazers stopped Milwaukee 113-97, Chicago Bulls nipped Boston Celtics 84-82, Buffalo Braves dropped Detroit Pistons 97-93, New Orleans Jazz defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 103-91, Kansas City Kings downed Phoenix Suns 106-100 and Golden State Warriors defeated Washington 100-89.

In Sunday's American Basketball Association games, New York Nets trimmed Utah Stars 123-111, Kentucky Colonels downed Denver Nuggets 106-103, the Spirits of St. Louis beat Virginia Squires 106-99 and San Diego Sails stopped San Antonio Spurs 105-102.

On Saturday, Kentucky topped Utah 118-105 and Virginia dropped San Diego 109-105.

Guard Lucius Allen hit a baseline jumper with 1:26 remaining in overtime to give the Lakers a three-point advantage, 114-111, then forward Cazzie Russell scored on a breakaway to put the game out of reach with 48 seconds remaining.

LBC Still Ubeaten

London Boxing Club extended its undefeated streak in the South Island Big Six Hockey League to 10 games Saturday by playing to a 7-7 tie with the Lakers in Lake Cowichan.

City Runner Guns To Eighth Place

Canadian-Owned Mare Triumphs

By The Canadian Press

Dulcia, an Argentine-bred and Canadian-owned mare, surprised the more highly-regarded males Saturday at Santa Anita as champion jockey Bill Shoemaker guided her from last place to victory in the $350,000 National Thoroughbred Championship.

The rally by Dulcia, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Art Stollery of Toronto, carried her to a neck victory over the gelding Royal Glint in the richest of all United States handicap races.

"I think Dulcia must now deserve mare-of-the-year honors," said trainer Charlie Whittingham. "I told Shoemaker to make one run at them. I didn't figure they'd be so far back and he had to circle the whole field because Dulcia doesn't like to run on the inside."

"It was a good ride, what else can I say?" declared the veteran jockey after the big money victory. "I guess everybody but me had trouble. She got moving a half-mile out and that was it."

Tizna was third in the field of 11 in the 1¼-mile race.

Dulcia went off at 7-to-1 and trailed the field by at least 20 lengths rounding the turn into the back stretch. Then Shoemaker began his move that he ended with the stretch drive victory.

The two favorites, Ancient Title and Forceten, finished far back, and the French mare Allez France, a millionairess making her U.S. debut, wound up dead last.

Dulcia, a six-year-old daughter of Gran Atleta, had won $188,417 in her career until capturing the $240,000 top purse Saturday. She returned $16.40, 6.20 and 5.60. Royal Glint, a 19-to-1 shot returned $17.00 and 10.00, and Tizna, who went off at 20-to-1, returned $9.00.

L'Enjoleur, the three-year-old Canadian champion owned by J. Louis Levesque of Montreal and ridden by Sandy Hawley, started from the No. 1 post position, held the lead for the first half of the race but faded to finish sixth.

Ancient Title went off at 2-to-1 odds but finished seventh and Forceten, expected to give Ancient Title his toughest competition, wound up 10th.

The time of the fast track was well off record of 1:59 3-5 by Bold Bidder in 1966.

Bowling Queen

Lorna Pollock of Victoria, the leading qualifier Saturday, captured top honors in the third annual "Queen of the Lanes" tenpin bowling tournament by defeating Louise Smith of Vancouver 346-313 in the two-game total final Sunday at Mayfair Lanes.

Car Slalom To Gibson

Mike Gibson booted his Mini Cooper through the course in one minute, 26.45 seconds Sunday to take first place in class "B" and set fast time of the day during the final Victoria Motor Sport Club slalom of the year on the Department of National Defence property off Wilfert Road in Colwood.

Results:

Good Start For UVic

One junior entry fared well and one didn't as the Victoria Women's Basketball League opend its 1975-6 season Sunday at the University of Victoria's old gym.

UVic's Jayvees, one of three junior entries making up the six-team league along with two senior "B" squads and a senior "A" entry, overwhelmed Senior "B" II 66-22. Twyla Moser led the way for UVic with 17 points while Yeta Dillalla and Linda Rodgers each scored nine.

First United's senior "B" team, sparked by Marilyn Cooper's 16 points and 13 by Mary-Lou Kaufman, drubbed London Boxing Club's junior team 60-27 in Sunday's other game.

First United Unitys and Home Lumber, the "A" team, meet tonight at Victoria High, starting at 9 p.m.

Braves, Wings Win

Rob Coldwell scored four goals Sunday to power Saanich Braves to a 7-4 victory over Juan de Fuca Gulls and a share of first place in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

At Memorial Arena, Victoria Ray's Red wings blanked Lake Cowichan Bairds 10-0. Larry Boldt made only 12 stops in recording the shutout while Wayne Proceviat, Garth Cunningham and Stan Alstad each scored two goals to spark the attack.

Ken Wilson, Larry Hansen, Jack Vaykin and Dwight Crockett scored Victoria's other goals.

Heart Attack Fatal to Skier

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Matti Maki, a member of Canada's national cross-country ski team and a silver-medalist at the 1974 Canadian championships, died Thursday night of a heart attack. He was 32. Maki, a native of Finland who came here in 1968, was one of the top cross-country skiers in Ontario and held many Northern Ontario titles.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Red hair streaming from under the gem-studded tiara, Goldie Glitters tearfully blew kisses to the crowd as the new Santa Monica College homecoming queen. The crowning of Goldie nearly caused a major confrontation as the football team threatened to walk off the field if Goldie — a 6-foot 3-inch female impersonator—was named queen.

"For the first time you can put a real queen under your crown," the 29-year-old student said as he bounded onto the field in a shimmering powder-blue tuxedo with his long, flaming hair dangling over a white ruffled shirt. Meanwhile, the student body of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill has elected a 21-year-old senior as its Homecoming Person. Delmar Williams, wearing a white dinner jacket, accepted the traditional bouquet of roses during halftime at the Wake Forest - North Carolina football game. The curly-haired, brown-eyed male student defeated 12 female contestants for the title.

BUENOS AIRES — Argentine President Maria Estela Peron was admitted to hospital early today with a gallbladder complaint. A presidential communique said she felt ill after returning here from a weekend by the sea and was admitted to a private clinic for observation. Her condition was not serious the communique added.

ROME — Italian newspapers say the 17-year-old killer of Pier Paolo Pasolini says the Italian film director started a fight with him after the youth resisted homosexual advances. Pasolini, 53, was clubbed to death Sunday, his head smashes by a heavy wooden object, and then his body was run over by his own car on a dirt road between Ostia and Fiumicino, southwest of Rome.

LONDON — Margaret, Duchess of Argyle, who a judge once accused of promiscuity, draws a discreet veil over her love life in her memoirs Forget Not published today. The 62-year-old duchess' reticence will disappoint London society, which has been eagerly awaiting the autobiography. In Forget Not she admits one passionate affair but identifies her lover only as "Bill."

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Singer Kitty Bruce has filed suit against the publishers of a biography and the producers of a movie about her late father, comedian Lenny Bruce. In the suits, filed in Los Angeles Superior Court, she alleged they had appropriated his name and likeness for commercial profits without consent or payment to his estate. Bruce, whose comedy routine sometimes led to his arrest on charges of obscenity, died in 1966. Named as defendants in one suit, seeking damages of $11 million for the movie Lenny, were United Artists, Douglas International Corp., Marvin Worth Corp., L.B. Corp. and Grove Press. In the other suit, seeking damages of $4 million, the defendants in the publication of Ladies and Gentlemen, Lenny Bruce, are Ballantine Books, Random House, Albert Goldman and Lawrence Schiller.

NEW YORK — Jean Paul Sartre, the French writer and leftist theoretician, has spoken out in defence of terrorism. "Terrorism is always admissible" as a reply to the "uselessness and violence" of the establishment in some countries, Sartre is quoted as saying by Newsweek magazine.

LOS ANGELES, Calif — Singer Eddie Fisher, whose three previous marriages to Hollywood stars ended in divorce, has married former beauty queen Terry Richard, a spokesman said during the weekend. Fisher, who has been appearing in Las Vegas, will leave Nov. 11 with his bride for Australia, where he has a singing tour.

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. — Clyde Enlow, a Cherokee Indian Nation employee, hurled a buffalo chip 106 feet to win the title in the first annual Chiporama. The contest was the feature event of the Cherokee Indian Nation's Fall Festival here.

HYATTSVILLE, Md. — After 236 hours, 42 minutes and 30 seconds, disc jockey Jim Fitzgerald ended his marathon broadcast. Fitzgerald "looked kind of ragged" but probably might have gone on a couple more hours, a spokesman said at the end of the marathon broadcast. The Guiness Book of World Records lists the previous mark for staying awake and playing records at 208 hours.

TORONTO — Arthur Maloney, Ontario ombudsman, said Sunday his office will investigate statements and charges that a major riot might occur at any provincial correctional institution at any time. Maloney said he would reveal the nature of the investigation after he receives a report.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — H. R. Kessler opened his door Friday night expecting to see a trick-or-treater and found instead a young woman he later estimated to be in her early twenties. The 63-year-old said the woman was wearing a hooded coat, which she slowly pulled aside, revealing she wore nothing underneath. "I've never had anything like this happen to me in all my 63 years," he said.

Goldie

Honest Politicians . . .

KINGSTON, N.Y. — "We don't believe in telling the truth," proclaimed a prominent headline in one of the odder political advertisements to appear in New York state.

"We do believe in character assassinations," it added.

"We do believe in false accusations. We don't believe in telling it like it is."

Raised eyebrows and double-takes was the normal reaction as readers read and reread four scrambled statements in a half-page political advertisement supporting Republican candidates for the Ulster County legislature.

An advertising executive of the paper said the mistake apparently occurred in the composing room of the newspaper when the lines of copy listing the "do's and don'ts" was transposed. The reversal was not deliberate, he added.

LONG-LIFE RECIPE

RUTLAND, Mass — Amelia Copcut says the reason she has lived to be 109 years old is she never married. "I never had a real beau either," she told reporters at her birthday party.

Miss Copcut, dressed in a yellow-and-white colonial style dress and matching sun bonnet, welcomed well-wishers at the party, drank some spiked punch and talked about her long life.

She was born Nov. 1, 1866, in New York's Greenwich Village and now lives here with a piece. "I used to love the theatre and all the actresses and actors," she said. "I admired a great many of them. But I wouldn't go alone to the matinees. I didn't have anyone to take me. I loved movies too. They are a great thing."

Miss Copcut retired from a Western Union job 59 years ago and says she was the company's oldest pensioner. But she says: "It would be nice if they had sent me a birthday card."

Truckers Vow Ferry Row

VANCOUVER (CP) — An angry independent trucker has promised further demonstrations by himself and other truckers to slow down provincial ferry traffic if the government refuses to either increase ferry sailings or give some priority to commercial trucks.

"We're prepared to go to jail if we have to," Albert Miller said Saturday.

He is a driver for the trucking firm operated by his brother, Nat.

"We'd just as soon be sitting in jail as sitting in a ferry line," said Miller.

He said a number of truckers disobeyed the law Friday by driving bumper-to-bumper to get on the Queen of Surrey ferry at Horseshoe Bay in West Vancouver.

Miller said two or three cars were left behind by the ferry after the trucks were loaded, but all the cars had arrived at the terminal after the trucks.

Transport Minister Carl Liden said Friday that all ferry traffic will be treated on a first come, first serve basis.

"There's going to be no privilege for anyone," Liden said in Victoria.

Miller said truckers had limited priority up until two weeks ago because each ferry sailing carried at least one row of trucks. Most regular truck traffic could be assured of space by arriving half an hour before each sailing, he said.

This priority was cancelled when the ferries went on a winter schedule of reduced sailings Oct. 20. Since then some truckers have been waiting in lineups four and five hours and some are denied access to ferries even when they arrive in time, he said.

"They're letting the cars on and holding the trucks back," Miller said.

The independent truckers said they planned to meet this weekend to discuss strategy.

"No, we don't have an association or anything," said Miller. "We're too dumb to have an organization, but we're not too dumb to demonstrate."

PULPMEN TO TALK TUESDAY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations between British Columbia pulp unions and the forest companies will resume here Tuesday, the regional president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada said Saturday.

Reg Ginn said that the talks will deal not only with wages, but will cover all aspects of their dispute.

The PPWC and the Canadian Paperworkers Union went on strike July 16, forcing closure of over 90 per cent of the province's forest operations.

Brazil Indian Slaughter Protested in Alberni

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — The first international indigenous people's conference ended Saturday with a protest over the genocide of native people in Brazil.

George Manuel, president of the newly-formed International Council of Indigenous Peoples, and chairman of the National Indian Brotherhood, said at a news conference that conditions of genocide and ethnocide prevented Brazilian delegates from attending the week-long conference.

Manuel said Brazilian Indians art considered legal minors and cannot leave the country without permission from the government.

"There's more world concern over the welfare of whales, seals and whooping cranes than over the Indian people of Brazil, who are being cut down like trees for the progress of the government," said Sam Deloria of Albuquerque, N.M. He was elected ICIP secretary-general.

Sixty deegates from 19 countries attended the conference and represented more than 37 million people.

The ICIP general assembly elected a five-member executive for two-year terms. Members are Manuel, Julio Dixon of Panama; Clemente Alcon of Bolivia; Neil Watene of New Zealand and Aslak Nils Sara of the Federated Same Council in Finland, Sweden and Denmark.

Missing Plane Found

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A light plane with two Anchorage, Alaska, men aboard which was reported missing Saturday on a flight between this central B.C. city and Watson Lake, Yukon, was found Sunday.

Search and rescue officials said the plane carrying Dick Clawson and Mike Oberry was apparently forced down by bad weather onto Scoop Lake, 140 miles northwest of here, and was unable to take off because of battery problems.

The men were reported in good condition.

ALKALI LAKE (CP) — Police have identified Martin Riedemann and John William Rathjen, both of Alkali Lake, as the men who drowned in a boating incident late Friday during a Halloween celebration.

They said Riedemann was in a small boat about 100 yards from shore setting off fireworks when a strong wind capsized the boat.

Two spectators from shore plunged into the water and reached Riedemann, who was clinging to the side of the boat, police said.

They said Reidemann apparently died when the rescue party attempted to get back to shore. Rathjen also disappeared before the third man reached shore.

Rathjen was still missing Saturday and police were searching for his body.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A six-day strike by paramedical staff at the Vancouver Neurological Centre ended Saturday when members of the Health Sciences Association voted to accept a one-year contract giving increases averaging $245 a month.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ron Allen, Canadian director of Food for the Hungry, said Friday the group raised more than $16,000 at a hunger relief auction. The auction itself raised about $4,000, but the provincial government will match that sum and the federal government will match the combined amount from the auction and the province.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Organizers for the $100-a-plate dinner with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau on Nov. 21 say almost all tickets have been sold.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail of $3,000 was set Friday for Roy Lowther, 52, charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in the slaying of his wife Patricia.

Len Doust, lawyer for Lowther, said bail was opposed by the Crown on grounds that it was not in the public interest to grant it but Mr. Justice John Bouck disagreed in a Supreme Court chambers hearing.

CASTLEGAR (CP) — The federal government's anti-inflation program is unfair to labor, a candidate for the federal Progressive Conservative Party leadership said Saturday.

John Fraser said in an interview during a meeting of the party's caucus that some labor groups, who signed contracts before January, 1974, are exempt from the guidelines.

The MP from Vancouver South also said wage controls were not necessarily price controls.

He said that until changes are made to ensure prices are restrained effectively, support of labor will be lacking.

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Diana Bissell of Vancouver was elected co-ordinator of a 23-member standing committee Sunday at the completion of a three-day convention of the British Columbia Federation of Women.

The 75 delegates ratified a new constitution stating that the objectives of the federation were to implemtnt legal, social, economic and cultural changes necessary for the eradication of sexism.

Other policies dealt with education, childcare, employment and health.

Forethought Pays Off in Rain...

The value of forethought paid off one unexpectedly rainy day last week.

I had been hoping for a 30-minute chance to repot a couple of indoor plants, but it finally came on the rainy day.

The two pots had been hunted out from a stack so they were easy to get, then all that was needed was fresh good soil for both pots.

That too was a simple job. In late September, the summer compost heap had been dug over to complete the rotting down of the outside of the heap.

During the process I filled a five gallon can having a few small holes in the bottom, with brown loamy soil from near the bottom of the heap — Lovely soil for potting.

It was already damp, for the heap had been soaked a couple of times during summer to keep the bacteria working.

On top, a shovel of sand was dumped and worked in a little with a hand fork, to keep it loose and suitable for almost any kind of planting indoors or out.

The can was then placed under our old lath shelter, among the collection of favorite shrubs needing just a bit of borken shade until they grow large enough to provide their own shade as a community.

On the day of using the soil, it was just the right dampness for potting, so both the new pots were filled and brought indoors to take the chill from the soil.

With a newspaper section on the kitchen table and another on the floor, the repotting took less than 15 minutes, and a potful of cuttings was set at the same time.

The large flat pure purple blossoms have been continuous since early summer, first in a semi-shady spot outdoors, but since Oct. 1 even more freely in a cool light spot indoors.

With only one more bud to open, all the branches have now been cut back to where new shoots can be seen. The new pot provides an extra half inch of width and depth so that watering can be safely decreased until March.

Tibouchina (this is said to be a native name for the plant) was popular and in good supply for 10 years or so here, and is still available I believe. A splendid indoor shrub which will also thrive in its pot outdoors from late May to late September.

My second plant needing repotting was a Sweet Basil, a favorite herb which has provided leaves and bud clusters to flavor soups and salads for many weeks. This is an East Indian herb, Ocimum basilicum, liking warm air and rich soil.

During our summers in the open garden it must be well supplied with moisture in the soil.

Now after being cut back in September and potted, the one plant should continue growing indoors until the new year at least. Sunshine will help but we cannot know how much there will be.

The outdoor compost heap is an inexpensive source of good potting soil. It is usually fine enough without screening. It needs the addition of a little sand and sometimes some finely screened peatmoss.

The peatmoss used outdoors is a coarse grind, so most of the large pieces are screened out for using with a few stones as pot drainage.

No fertilizer of any kind is required at repotting time.

If you still have no potting soil ready for your indoor winter needs do something about it the first day you have an hour outdoors.

Pipeline Jobs Offer Contrasts

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (Reuter) — Hacking out an oil pipeline route from the shore of the Arctic Ocean to Valdez, on the Gulf of Alaska to the south, means passing through some of the most rugged territory in North America.

But for the 21,000 men and women employed last summer on the Alyeska pipeline, building the project was a cross between a prison workgang and a resort vacation.

The oil companies operating on the flat expanse of Arctic tundra surrounding Prudhoe Bay have spared no expense in making life on the North Slope pleasant.

At the same time, they have scored significant advances in the technology of working in the harsh Arctic.

British Petroleum-Sohio and Atlantic Richfield have been chosen by the oil companies that own leases in the area to drill and pump oil from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, from where it will be loaded aboard tankers for shipment south.

"If this were in the lower 48 (states)," said one engineer, "it would be a desert."

Precipitation measures only eight to 12 inches a year. Snowfall measures little more than a foot each winter, and Atlantic Richfield has built snowfences around the hundreds of ponds that dot the area to help preserve the water for drinking.

Yet because of the low temperatures—records kept at the Atlantic Richfield operations centre show lows of 40 degrees below zero fahrenheit (minus 40 degrees centigrade), and the "wind-chill factor" makes this feel as cold as 100 degrees below (minus 73 centigrade)—whatever water or snow there is does not evaporate."

More important yet, the soil beneath the surface is permanently frozen—a condition called permafrost—and Arctic construction depends on keeping it frozen. If part of the permafrost were to thaw, engineers say, there would be a settling of possibly disastrous consequences.

The BP operations centre sits atop pylons sunk into the permafrost. The structure looks like an elevated ferry boat, with curved sides at the bottom and with the walls leaning outward—a design developed in a wind tunnel for maximum air flow.

The aim, a BP spokesman told a visitor, is to keep the surface of the earth below the operations centre as cold as possible to guard against thawing the permafrost.

Inside the centre, bright colors and startling graphics, plus endless rows of fluorescent lights, add to the air of a vacation resort. Meals in the centre's cafeteria are free, and BP provides a permanent display of snacks—fruit, candy, cakes and nuts.

Each worker at the centre has an individual room and shares a bath with one other worker. Some of the rooms look out onto the empty expanse of land behind the bay—there is no independent settlement at Prudhoe Bay. Others look out onto the Arctic Ocean, and inside rooms have a view of an indoor playground and exercise area covered with artificial grass.

A swimming pool and ranks of pool tables also are provided for workers' entertainment.

Yet life in Prudhoe Bay is lacking certain amenities. There are, for example, no women employed here, although women have been hired to work in camps along the route of the pipeline.

Workers earn an average of $1,500 a month, officials say, although spokesmen for BP are reluctant to discuss specific wages.

Officials at first tried to ban liquor from the pipeline camps, but when this proved impracticable, a hard-and-fast rule was instituted that any man found drunk was immediately fired and shipped out. All firearms are strictly prohibited.

BCR BONDS PAY 10.5%

B.C. Railway bonds carrying an interest rate of 10.5 per cent went on sale today.

The $50 million issue was approved by cabinet last week and is within the corporation's legislative borrowing authority.

The 25-year bonds will mature Nov. 3 2000 and can be purchased in denominations of $1,000, $5,000, $25,000 and $100,000.

'Nasty Gov't' Alternative to N-War

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A nuclear arms expert says "a very nasty kind of world government" may be the only way to keep the world from blowing itself up in a nuclear war.

Writing in the November issue of Harvard Magazine, five panelists from Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology said they believed nuclear war in some form will erupt before 1999.

"A very nasty kind of world government may be necessary if we are to survive in the world I see ahead," wrote one of the participants, George Rathjens, an M.I.T. professor.

"It would take an enormous surrender of sovereignty to bring nuclear proliferation under control . . . a radical change in our whole life-style, meaning the surrender of most democratic values and the addition of rather brutal methods to keep the nuclear threat under control. A very nasty kind of world government may be necessary if we are to survive in the world I see ahead. Such a harsh government is a very grim prospect and it's not very likely. Nuclear war is more conceivable," said Rathjens, the former chief scientist and deputy director of the advanced research project agency for the department of defence.

The panelists said a nuclear war probably would not originate with the United States or the Soviet Union; but with relatively smaller nations like Israel, its Arab neighbors, India, Pakistan or some African country.

MAJOR scholarship-winning musicians whose student records bulge with awards won in numerous festivals are cellist Rolf Gilstein and pianist Walter Prossnitz, both in their teens. On Sunday they will share a Musical Art Society program at McPherson Playhouse with CBC Talent Festival winner, violinist Gwen Hoebig. They will be assisted by Robin Wood and Sandra Hunt. The concert will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Gunman Shot to Death In Four-Hour Siege

HAMILTON (CP) — A four-hour siege and gun battle ended today when police broke into an apartment and found the body of Robert LaRiviere, 32, who apparently died of self-inflicted wounds.

His body was found shortly after 4 a.m. when police used three shotgun blasts to break down the apartment door after firing tear gas through the windows.

Police first went to the building shortly after midnight after receiving a telephone call from a man. They cordoned off the building when they saw LaRiviere with a gun.

Police then telephoned LaRiviere in the apartment and reported that the man said:

"There's no way I'm coming out unless I'm dead. I'll kill any cop that tries to take me."

Police were gathered with guns drawn in the hallway outside the man's third-floor apartment when he fired nine shots from an M-1 carbine through the apartment door.

Later, LaRiviere stepped into the hallway and fired two shots at three policemen. Police fired two shots back and believe that one wounded the man.

None of the 35 policemen at the scene was injured.

Four tear-gas cannisters were fired into the apartment, which remained brightly-lit throughout the siege. LaRiviere appeared occasionally on the balcony, carying an M-1 carbine.

Seasick Canadians Rescued Off U.S.

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard began sailing a 31-foot sloop back to shore this morning while the vessel's three seasick Ontario crew members were treated aboard the accompanying coast guard cutter Reliance.

The coast guard reached the sloop Kluane Sunday night 300 miles southeast of Wilmington, N.C., but was unable to take it in tow because the vessel did not have sufficient gear.

Strong winds and high seas knocked out the vessel's auxiliary engine and the crew was too weak and inexperienced to navigate it back to shore, said coast guard spokesman Les Ceney.

Ceney said, "a coast guard crew is sailing the sloop. The craft didn't suffer any structural damage The crew was just too exhausted and inexperienced to do it themselves."

He said a decision had not been made where the sailboat would be taken, although it was sailing northwest toward the Frying Pan lighthouse, located 30 miles off the coast of Southport, N.C.

"It depends on a lot of things where they will end up going," Ceney said, "such as the winds and currents."

The sloop left Annapolis, Md., Oct. 13 for St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands and stopped in Southport, N.C., Oct. 28 before encountering trouble in 40-knot winds and 10 foot seas and calling for help Sunday morning.

The three Canadians were identified as Pierre Accelin, the skipper; Colin Stock and Dave McNaught, all of Ontario.

Scuba Diver Recovers

A Victoria scuba diver is in good condition and was scheduled for release today from Vancouver General Hospital following a diving incident Saturday afternoon off Ogden Point.

Michael Parker, 24, of 2923 Quadra, was flown to the hospital for decompression. He was one of four students in a scuba class practicing dives with instructor Wayne Rogers.

The accident was "very unusual" according to Rogers, who said Parker had passed a medical examination before taking the course.

The nature of his illness was not immediately known, but Rogers said the dive lasted less than half an hour and at the 35 foot depth the diver could not have suffered the bends.

"It was a freak accident. They're not sure why it happened," said his wife Wendy Parker today.

She said it may have been air embolism.

"It wasn't the bends. Air bubbles may have gotten into his lungs somehow, though," she said.

According to Rogers, Parker had suddenly felt sick and had to be helped ashore. An ambulance took him to Victoria General Hospital to await the helicopter flight to Vancouver because the decompression chamber at Naden was not in service.

Crowded Chimpanzees Turn to Brutal Killers

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — How once-gentle chimpanzees have become brutal killers as they are crowded into a smaller area and forced to compete for food was disclosed here by Dr. Jane Goodall, their observer.

The creatures are about 50 East African chimpanzees — among man's closest relatives — that she has been watching for 15 years in a 10-mile-long strip of Tanzanian forest along Lake Tanganyina.

"They were always like one big happy family," she said of the chimps that she virtually began living with in 1960.

But "I have to report a new thing, not the happiest thing" that has occurred in the past two years, she told scientists attending a conference here on human origins sponsored by the Louis Leakey Foundation.

As man has encroached on the creatures' wild feeding lands and taken them over, the once-peaceful animals have begun to engage in what she called "unparalleled" and "horrifying" and "savage" violence.

Goodall did not call the human encroachment and the animals' new brutality cause and effect. She said that still must be studied, and she gave other examples of violence among wild primates, violence not always connected with "territoriality."

But she said, "When I went to this area in 1960 and looked east, I saw just forest. Now I look east and see farmland . . ." This takes "the animals' food away, she added. Their habitat is destroyed, and they must look for other habitat."

The speaker who followed her — Dr. David Hamburg, Stanford University specialist on human and primate behavior — said of the Goodall report, "Contact between strangers, particularly crowding" is a frequent stimulus to chimpanzee aggressiveness.

Scientists have collected many examples of crowded animals becoming more violent. But seldom has anyone had so close a view of a wild group as Goodall.

Goodall, a Ph.D. and a visiting professor at Stanford when she is not in Tanzania with the chimpanzees, started living near the creatures at the late Dr. Leakey's encouragement.

"They always engaged in some attacks," she said. But these were usually brief and consisted mainly of noisy threats and displays, "with no discernible injury."

Then in 1968 the chimp "community" she had watched most split into two hostile groups. Gradually Goodall and her students began seeing "patrol activity" — forrays to the others' borders to confront or watch the new rivals, and sometimes to take away females.

In the last two years the watchers began seeing attacks — clawing, striking, biting, stamping, dragging and rock throwing — that maimed or caused death. Usually up to five or six males attacked a smaller group of males or females. One attack lasted more than three hours, Goodall reported.

In all, Goodal has counted seven deaths or probable deaths — injured animals who have not been seen again — or one-seventh of the chimp colony.

Often a beaten female will join the community that has attacked her, and has done so even in cases where her infant was killed by her attackers, the scientist said.

Aggressiveness and even killing are far from unknown among apes and monkeys, and they may have many causes. But in this case, she said, she must now look at crowding as the possible cause.

U.K. FISHERMEN SEEK 200 MILES

LONDON (AP) — A report of increasing world merchant fleets and Soviet domination in world fishing has brought a renewed call from industry for the extension of Britain's fishing limit to 200 from the present 12 miles.

Merchant fleets of all countries increased by about 10 per cent in the last 12 months to a total 243.2 million tons, double the figure for 1966, Lloyd's Register reports.

The register—officially titled Lloyd's Register of Shipping Statistical Tables 1975 — says the Soviet fishing fleet was 643 modern trawlers of at least 2,000 tons.

This is more than double the 259 for all others.

Even when small trawlers are included, the Soviet Union has more than one-third of the world's fishing fleet of 18,217 vessels totalling 7.8 million tons, the register says.

In fish factory ships, Soviet dominance was even greater. It has a reported total of 540 of the world's 723 vessels in that category and a gross tonnage of 2.9 million of the world tonnage of 3.5 million.

The figures brought a renewed call from a British fishing industry spokesman for extension of Britain's general fishing limit from 12 to 200 miles.

"We are reaching the situation where there just are not any more fish to be caught," the spokesman said. "The bigger the Soviet fleet the bigger their share of the catch—and what is left for the rest of the world gets smaller and smaller."

The U.S. merchant fleet increased by 158,000 tons, to 14.6 million, while the Soviet increase was 1.1 million tons, to 19.2 million, Lloyd's says.

It reports 39 per cent of the U.S. fleet is more than 25 years old while in Japan, which has the most modern fleet of the major maritime countries, 84 per cent of the fleet is less than 10 years old.

Japan's fleet increased by one million tons to 39.7 million, the report says, and the United Kingdom fleet went up by 1.6 million tons to 33.2 million.

Drowned Woman Found

The body of a 23-year-old Ucluelet woman missing when a trawler capsized off Estevan Point early Saturday was found washed up on a nearby beach almost 12 hours later by a civilian search party.

Tofino RCMP have not released the name of the woman pending notification of kin, nor did they give the name of her male companion who safely washed up on shore after more than half an hour in the water.

Apparently last seen wearing a lifejacket in a small life raft, she disappeared shortly after 1 a.m. Saturday, when the trawler got into trouble in stormy weather.

Searchers including CFB Comox personnel found the empty raft by 11 a.m. Saturday.

Peanuts and Me—Schulz Tells How It All Began

By CHARLES M. SCHULZ

On Oct. 2, 1950, a comic strip named Peanuts made its first appearance in a handful of American newspapers. Twenty-five years later, a boy named Charlie Brown, a cluster of other kids and an improbable beagle called Snoopy stand as the most universally beloved comic strip characters of all time. Charles Schulz, the creator of this kingdom, now takes his pen in hand to draw for his public a loving look at how his own memories of growing up and his experiences with his children affected and are used in the world's foremost comic strip. This is the first of five articles excerpted from the book "Peanuts Jubilee, My Life And Art With Charlie Brown and Others," just published by Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

And so, 25 years have gone by. At one strip per day, that comes to almost 10,000 comic strips.

I have been asked many times if I ever dreamed that Peanuts would become as successful as it is, and I think I always surprise people when I say, "Well, frankly, I guess I did expect it, because, after all, it was something I had planned since I was six years old."

Obviously I did not know that Snoopy was going to go to the moon, and I did not know that the term "happiness is a warm puppy" would prompt hundreds of other such definitions and I did not know that the term "security blanket" would become part of the American language; but I did have the hope that I would be able to contribute something to a profession that I can now say I have loved all my life.

Small Blackboard

In my earliest recollections of drawing I seem to be at a small blackboard with a paper roller, at the top of which are printed the ABCs. It was from this roller that I was able to learn the alphabet before I began kindergarten, and I know that I drew constantly on the blackboard and had it for many years.

It may have been on the first day of kindergarten, or at least during the first week, when the teacher handed out big crayons and huge sheets of white wrapping paper and told us to lie on the floor and draw something.

Several of my mother's relatives had recently moved from the Twin Cities to California, and I had heard my mother reading a letter from one of them telling of the sandstorms in California and also describing the tall palm trees. So when the teacher told us to draw whatever came to our minds, being familiar with the Minnesota snowstorms I drew a man shoveling snow, but then added a palm tree to the background.

I recall being somewhat puzzled when I was drawing the snow shovel because I was not quite sure how to put it in proper perspective. I knew that drawing the shovel square was not right, but I didn't know how to solve the problem. At any rate, it didn't seem to bother the teacher. She came around during the project, looked down at my drawing and said, "Someday, Charles, you're going to be an artist."

Father Was Barber

I think it is important for adults to consider what they were doing and what their attitudes were when they were the age that their own children are now. There is no other real way of understanding the problems of children.

For instance, Charlie Brown's father is a barber, which is autobiographical, for our family's life revolved around the long hours my dad spent in his barbershop. He loved his work very much.

Frequently in the evenings I went to the barbershop to wait for him to finish work and then walk home with him. He loved to read the comic strips, and we discussed them together and worried about what was going to happen next to certain of the characters.

On Saturday evening, I would run up to the local drugstore at 9 o'clock when the Sunday pages were delivered and buy the two Minneapolis papers. The next morning, the two St. Paul papers would be delivered, so we had four comic sections to read.

Several years later, when I became a delivery boy for one of the local printing firms, I used to pass the windows of the St. Paul Pioneer Press and look in where I could see the huge presses and the Sunday funnies tumbling down across the rollers. I used to wonder if I would ever see my own comics on those presses.

My mother also enccouraged me in my drawing but, sadly, never lived to see any of my work published. She died a long, lingering death from cancer when I was 20, and it was a loss from which I sometimes believe I never recovered. Today it is a source of astonishment to me that I am older than she was when she died, and realizing this saddens me even more.

When I was 13, we were given a black and white dog who turned out to be the forerunner of Snoopy. He was a mixed breed and slightly larger than the beagle Snoopy is supposed to be. Te probably had a little pointer in him and some other kind of hound, but he was a wild creature; I don't believe he was ever completely tamed.

50-Word Vocabulary

He had a "vocabulary" of approximately 50 words, and he loved to ride in the car. He waited every day for my dad to come home from the barbershop, and on Saturday evenings, just before 9:00, he always put his paws on my dad's chair to let him know it was time to get the newspapers.

When I decided to create the dog in Peanuts, I used the general appearance of Spike, with similar markings. I had decided that the dog in the strip was to be named "Sniffy," until one day, just before the strip was actually to be published, I was walking past a newsstand and glanced down at the rows of comic magazines. There I saw one about a dog named Sniffy, so I had to go back to my room and think of another name.

Fortunately, before I even got home, I recalled my mother once saying that if we ever had another dog, we should name him "Snoopy."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The ideal trump suit is the one in which the partnership has eight or more cards. On occasions, a partnership will struggle along with only seven trumps in the combined hands. One rare occasions, the partnership will have only six trumps. Once in a blue moon, there will be only five trumps in the combined hands. Today's deal concerns itself with a declarer who was playing a game contract with but five trumps in his own hand — and none in his dummy!

North - South vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ — ♥ AQ2 ♦ AK86 ♣ AJ8754
WEST ♠ A43 ♥ K985 ♦ QJ105 ♣ 103		EAST ♠ 97652 ♥ J104 ♦ 943 ♣ K9
	SOUTH ♠ KQJ108 ♥ 763 ♦ 72 ♣ Q62

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♦.

South's jump to four spades was an overbid, and if he had gone down, his partner would probably have had a few choice words to say about the bidding. However, North had no comment to make at the conclusion of play, for South's handling of his contract left nothing to be desired.

West's opening diamond lead was won by dummy's king, after which the jack of clubs was led. The trick was taken by East's king and a diamond was returned, driving out dummy's ace. The South hand was then re-entered via the club queen, and the queen of trumps was laid down. West permitted the queen to win. Next came the king of spades, West taking his ace (a heart and a diamond were discarded from dummy on South's two trump leads).

West now shifted to a heart, and declarer put up dummy's queen, which won the trick. Declarer then re-entered his own hand by ruffing a diamond, after which he cashed the jack and 10 of trumps. When West discarded a heart on the last trump lead, East was known to still possess the only trump left in the deck.

Declarer then led his remaining club to dummy's ace, and it didn't matter whether East trumped or didn't, for if he didn't clubs would be continued until East ruffed. And since East had been dealt but three diamonds, all he could make from here in was his fifth trump.

Of course, if East had possessed a fourth diamond, declarer would have been defeated — but he nevertheless would have received an "A" for effort.

Inconsistency seems to be the problem with Victoria Cougars, who dropped an 8-2 decision to Kamloops Chiefs Sunday in Western Canada Junior Hockey League action. The loss came on the heels of a 6-2 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings Saturday and coach Pat Ginnell benched his high-scoring line of Jim Gustafson, Danny Lucas and Jeff McDill after the first period in Kamloops. The line accounted for four of Saturday's goals but lacked cohesion with the defence Sunday. Page 10.

Goaltender Ed Giacomin, traded away by New York Rangers, returned to Madison Square Garden Sunday to a thunderous three-minute ovation, then sparked his new team, Detroit Red Wings, to a 6-4 National Hockey League victory. Page 10.

Victoria Scorpions staged a remarkable comeback victory Saturday against North Shore Mountaineers in Dogwood Senior "A" men's basketball action, scoring 46 points in the fourth quarter for a 136-123 triumph. But Sunday defensive lapses proved costly as Victoria lost. Page 10.

University of Victoria Vikings won their first Canada West University Athletic Association soccer championship in Edmonton, wrapping up the title with a 4-0 victory over Saskatchewan Huskies. Vikings will represent their conference in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union championship tournament, a five-team affair, starting Friday at UVic. Page 11.

Ottawa Forcing Extra $750M Into Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — A government plan to lever $730 million more out of private lenders nexxt year to finance low-and-moderately-priced housing was announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

The minister also told the Commons that the government will open the subsidized home ownership program to more Canadians and change some grants to loans under the home ownership plan.

New grants will be offered to induce municipalities to approve more housing projects for low-and moderate-income families, he said. In addition, there would be an increase in interest-reducing payments to builders who were willing to put up rental units with rents fixed in agreement with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

And the government will establish by next spring the long-promised Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp. (FMEC), which is to buy and sell mortgages, the minister said.

The government's target in residential construction is one million starts in the next four years, beginning with 235,000 units in 1976, Danson said.

Danson also said today the federal government will seek consistency in rent control rules across the country.

Commenting as he entered a federal-provincial housing conference, he said the federal government has asked the provinces to implement rent controls to fit in with the federal anti-inflation program.

But the government expects there will be sufficient flexibility to deal with specific local conditins, Danson said.

The minister also said he will outline to the provincial ministers the housing proposals he will be announcing to

SNAP VOTE RUMOR

With 38 days required for election procedures, the earliest likely date for a vote is Dec. 11.

Announcement of the press conference came shortly after news agencies received tips from NDP and B.C. Federation of Labor sources that the premier had decided to call an election.

Barrett has continually said there was only a 10 per cent chance of an election this year and a vote was more likely next year after redistribution.

CIA, Defence Chiefs Fired in Ford Shake-Up

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders today said President Ford had told them he has fired Defence Secretary James Schlesinger and CIA director William Colby. Sources also said Henry Kissinger had given up one of his major jobs — head of the National Security Council.

In an apparently unrelated incident — but one that added to the largest shake-up in the U.S. administration since the Watergate-related "Saturday Night Massacre" two years ago — Vice-president Nelson Rockefeller withdrew his name from consideration as Ford's running-mate in 1976.

An informed source at the White House who did not want to be identified said there was "much more to come."

NBC-TV reported today that both Schlesinger and Colby had confirmed their dismissals. Ford called a news conference for 4:30 Victoria time this afternoon, presumably to address the situation.

House Speaker Carl Albert said Ford told him Schlesinger would be replaced by Donald Rumsfeld, current White House Chief of Staff, and Colby would be replaced by George Bush, U.S. representative to China.

Albert said Ford telephoned him to say, "I wanted you to know first hand that Secretary Schlesinger will be replaced and so will Mr. Colby."

Albert said Ford did not mention the Kissinger change but that a presidential meeting with congressional leaders was scheduled later today.

The informed source said the so-called transition group which helped Ford during the early days of his presidency was the "architect" of the shake-up rather than Kissinger, as some observers believe.

Former defence secretary Melvin Laird is a prime mover in the group which still keeps in close touch with Ford; so is William Scranton, former governor of Pennyslvania.

Another member of the group is Rumsfeld.

No reason was given for the dismissals but sources speculated that it grew out of a difference of opinion between Schlesinger, who favored a strong defence and a tougher stand against Moscow; and Ford and Kissinger, proponents of detente.

ROCKY
. . . won't run

Colby had been expected to leave early next year because of recent criticism of the CIA.

Rockefeller's letter to Ford apparently had no relation to the reports of the national security changes. The vice president said he would complete his term.

"After much thought I have decided I do not wish my name to enter into your consideration for the upcoming Republican nomination," Rockefeller, 67, told Ford.

He pledged full co-operation with the administration and said he would "assist in every way I can in carrying on to cope with the problems that confront the nation."

Long, Cold Winter

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — The six inside postal workers in this northwestern Manitoba community returned to work today because, said one worker, they are finding it hard to get along financially.

"We couldn't go any longer without a pay cheque," said one of the female workers.

"It costs a lot of money to live up in this country and it's a long, cold winter."

Russell Jones, local president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said a few of the employees also were concerned about their pensions.

"We're just putting in time but at least we're getting paid," he said.

Jones said the fact the town is small enough for everyone to know the post office personnel added to the strikers' problems.

"You can't event walk down the street without getting a blast. We hate to see all these people not being able to send their parcels. We know everyone here."

He said he doesn't expect any adverse reaction despite the fact the mining community is a strong union town.

CUPW Predicts Week-Long Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks aimed at resolving the national postal strike could continue to the end of the week, chief union negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said today.

Parrot made the remark as he entered talks with post office negotiators aimed at settling the strike which now is in its third week.

The two sides are far apart on the issue of casual labor and salaries, he said.

The next move in the national postal strike must come from the the Canadian Union of Postal Workers. Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Sunday night.

In an interview Mackasey said that the government's last wage offer is clear out.

"I have no intention of going back to cabinet to ask for a higher monetary package," he said.

The negotiations have yet to clear the major hurdles of non-union casual employees, electronic surveillance and wages.

Mackasey said Saturday the post office cannot operate without casual labor, especially in peak periods such as Christmas.

The union has asked for a wage increase of $2.73 an hour, or 51 per cent, over 27 months. Ottawa's offer is for an increase of $1.70 an hour, or 38 per cent, over 30 months.

The 22,000 workers now average $4.56 an hour.

Joe Davidson, president of the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Sunday the rank and file have been overwhelming in their support of their negotiating team. Davidson spent most of last week touring union locals in Western Canada.

Davidson, responding to comments from Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey suggesting that his presence at the bargaining session could speed the talks, replied: "I have every confidence in the negotiating team and have no plans to join the talks."

Meanwhile, Marcel Perreault, head of the Montreal CUPW local, and Parrot addressed about 300 union members in Montreal Sunday.

QUEEN PUSHES BUTTON

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Queen Elizabeth pressed a small golden button today and sent oil gushing ashore by pipeline from a field under the North Sea, 110 miles off shore.

It was a symbolic opening—the field has been in operation for a month — but it marked what Britons hope will be the beginning of the end of their economic doldrums.

Strict security precautions were in force to protect not only the Queen but the valuable oil.

Some Scottish nationalists, and in particular a beakaway group of militants known as the Tartan Army, have claimed the oil from the rich fields off Scotland's coast as belonging to Scotland alone, and in the last two years there have been four minor explosions at pumping stations along the 127-mile pipeline from the shore to he Grangemouth refinery.

PEANUTS JUBILEE

Peanuts, the greatest success story in the history of comic strips, is 25 years old.

Charles Schulz, creator of Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Lucy, Linus and the rest of the Peanuts' gang, tells how the strip was created and developed in a five-part series beginning in the Victoria Times today on Page 34.

Because of the postal strike a number of other favorite comics are missing for this week, but they'll be resumed when alternative delivery methods take effect.

War Breaks Out In Bangladesh

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — Hostilities between army troops for and against the new military-backed Bangladesh government exploded today into an exchange of gunfire in Dacca, diplomatic sources here report.

Japanese sources said shooting broke out in an army barracks early in the day but made no mention of casualties.

After the fighting, troops were patrolling the streets of Dacca and all traffic was halted except for cars of government officials and diplomats.

Western diplomatic sources say the trouble resulted from a power struggle within the military-backed government, which mounted an Aug. 15 coup that brought down the government of president Mujibur Rahman.

The nation's only international airport, in Dacca, was shut down today and most communications abroad were cut.

The Japanese sources would not elaborate on the shooting incident or the fate of military officials within the new government. Western diplomats said there had been no counter coup.

Dispelling speculation of a new coup, a U.S. embassy spokesman said "Mushtaque is still in power."

His reference was to Khondakar Mushtaque Ahmed, the 55-year-old former commerce minister who assumed the presidency in the military-backed August coup in which Mujib and members of his family were killed.

Another U.S. embassy spokesman said today's trouble came from "within the military." He would not specify the "trouble," but said the "old army establishment doesn't like the young officers running the country. They're trying to sort out the army."

Rahman, the Bangladesh Times reported before communications were cut, kept a private army which he assigned to kill, torture and rape those who opposed his rule.

Nuclear Waste Problem Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. estimates that there will be 115 nuclear reactors in Canada within 25 years, most owned and operated by provincial power utilities.

In the next 15 years, $212 billion will be spent on nuclear energy. By 1990, the expenditure for each family will have doubled to $2,400 a year.

By the end of the century, 100 tons of nuclear waste will have accumulated. Highly dangerous, it will have to be stored for thousands of years.

Radioactive material such as plutonium — 15 pounds of which can produce a home-built bomb — will be carried about the country in increasing amounts, by truck, rail, air and ship.

AECL has just started a "long-term development program" based on fuelling reactors with plutonium should a future shortage of uranium require this. The use of thorium fuel also is being looked into.

At present, Ontario Hydro plans a $1.5-billion nuclear station on Lake Ontario that would produce 4.4 million horsepower of electric power.

Yet nuclear reactors are still such a question mark that despite years of negotiation, the federal government has been unable to get private companies to insure them.

Official estimates say the worst possible accident in a reactor would cost tens of thousands of lives and do billions of dollars in damages.

But the concern of the insurance companies is more subtle. It revolves around the unknown effects of low-level radiation emissions not only on nuclear plant workers but on surrounding populations. Homeowner and automobile insurance policies already exempt companies from liability for nuclear damage.

So-called safe expsoure levels to radiation have been lowered steadily in the last 50 years. But as low as the "safe" levels are now, there is still concern about the damage such emissions may be causing.

These are some of the reasons a group of 45 associations, known as the Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, have proclaimed "nuclear responsibility week" beginning Tuesday.

One convert to the coalition is Ian Connerty, 28, who as research assistant to Lloyd Francis (L-Ottawa West) for the last eight months has drafted dozens of questions about the nuclear industry in Canada.

Like questions asked by Maurice Foster (L-Algoma) and Allan Lawrence (PC-Northumberland-Durham), they tend to reflect the ignorance of even MPs about the 30-year-old industry.

Labor Group Hits Gov't Curbs

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The founding convention of the British Columbia council of the Confederation of Canadian Unions agreed Sunday that Federal wage and price controls are "greedy, one-sided legislation."

About 50 delegates also agreed to oppose the B.C. government Collective Bargaining Continuation Act, which ordered work to resume in four sectors of the economy.

Delegates also urged the B.C. government to use price interest and rent controls to redistribute wealth.

Kent Rowley, CCU national secretary-treasurer, said the theme of the meeting was to educate people to the Canadian labor movement.

"The Canadian labor movement is dominated by U.S. unions and because of that it is in a sad state of affairs," he said.

Rowley told a news conference the B.C. council of the CCU will co-ordinate activities for member unions which represent about 14,000 workers in the province and the territory.

He said the CCU has expansion plans in B.C., but would not elaborate.

Delegates also decided to establish a committee to draft resolutions on the B.C. Labor Act. The committee will seek a meeting with the government next month.

The group also wants one member on the government's labor education committee, said Rowley.

Tough Fight Warning For Socreds

Wallace Prepared

Canadian Press

Dr. Scott Wallace, leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Party and its lone MLA, said Saturday he is more than ready for the provincial election next year.

Wallace, who has recently completed a provincial tour, told a group of Conservatives meeting at his Oak Bay home that "anyone who takes me on should be warned I'm loaded for bear, mainly Social Credit Bear."

He was referring to a recent suggestion by a Social Credit spokesman that Wallace would lose his Oak Bay seat to a Socred candidate.

He said if it came to a choice between the NDP and Social Credit, "you can be damned sure that somewhere down the line you'll get the NDP again."

CAOUETTE QUITTING

OTTAWA (CP) — Citing health reasons, Social Credit Leader Real Caouette announced he will step down as leader of his party at a weekend meeting of the party's national council.

The council, at its biennial convention, decided Sunday that a leadership convention will take place in Ottawa in the fall of 1976. Caouette will remain as leader until that time.

The 58-year-old leader, who has been a diabetic for some time, says that his health in recent months has been improving but he does not have the vitality to fight another national election campaign.

He will remain MP for the northwestern Quebec riding of Temiscamingue.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Hyndman, newly-elected president of the Social Credit Party of British Columbia, says party leader Bill Bennett faces a tough attack as the province prepares for an election expected next year.

"I predict the toughest campaign, against Bill Bennett that ever faced a Canadian political leader," Hyndman said at the banquet that closed the party's annual two-day convention, attended by 1,765 registered delegates and visitors.

Hyndman, who as a twice-defeated Progressive Conservative provincial candidate and member of a long-standing Tory family symbolizes what party officials call the "unity party," said Premier Barrett can face the challenge of Social Credit by attacking the party or its leader.

"If he's successful in either one, he has a reasonable chance of surviving," Hyndman told the delegates.

He told them Bennett would need their full loyalty and support.

Robert Bonner, attorney-general in W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit government, defeated in 1972 by the NDP, said resolutions dealt with by delegates reflected their concern for senior citizens and housing problems.

Bonner, chairman of the resolutions committee, said a variety of resolutions were passed calling for expenditures on senior citizens' programs despite calls from Bill Bennett and his father, W. A. C., to keep governing spending down.

Bonner said delegates defeated other resolutions that would have called on a Social Credit government to spend money on new programs.

The resolutions made no wild promises and that the delegates advanced sane, sensible solutions to problems facing the province while calling for fiscal responsibility, he added.

Ken Kiernan, retiring vice-president and treasurer, told the delegates the party had $285,200 in the treasury as of Aug. 31. It spent $354,000 in the last fiscal year, $96,000 on advertising, $50,000 on headquarters staff and another $39,000 for summer students at party offices in the province.

the Commons later today. He did not elaborate.

John Rhodes, Ontario housing minister, said he could make no commitments before the conference on whether to go along with the federal rent control recommendations.

Believing that rent controls would deter rental construction, the province wanted to hear what incentives Ottawa had to stimulate production.

Yurko said that the capital cost allowance tax measure, which is to expire Dec. 30, should be extended for at least five more years to encourage rental building.

The allowance is a tax measure which enables lawyers and doctors to offset against other income a portion of the cost of borrowing capital to build rental units.

TWO KEY ISSUES FACE UNIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal price and wage controls and the provincial government's back-to-work legislation are expected to be two of the main issues discussed at key labor union conventions this week.

Across the street at the Devonshire Hotel, delegates from the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada will hold their annual convention starting Tuesday. The union, one of those legislated back to work by the Barrett government's Bill 146, does not belong to the federation.

PPWC delegates will also be choosing a new union executive. National president Reg Ginn and vice-president Stan Shewaga, of the union's Nanaimo local, said Friday they have not decided if they would seek another term.

Barrett Was Right

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, told a labor audience Sunday that he cannot criticize Premier Barrett's government for its recent decision to order four major unions in British Columbia back to work.

"If the public interest is in danger or if the economy is grinding to a halt, I guess even a democratic, socialist premier has no alternative but to do what Barrett did," he told a meeting of the political education committee of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

Lewis said he does not like to see governments use their powers to order striking workers back to their jobs.

"But if you have no alternative, what the hell do you do?"

Radiation Forces Family from Home

DELORO, Ont. (CP) — Ted Galloway of Deloro says he and his family have been ordered to leave his home because of the danger of atomic radiation.

Mr. Galloway said representatives of the Ontario health ministry and officials of the Atomic Energy Control Board delivered a letter to him Friday ordering his family to leave their home within two weeks.

The letter said health inspectors had "found a condition that is dangerous or likely to become dangerous to health and safety because of the high concentration of radioactive material in the air within the household."

The letter, signed by Dr. J. H. Aitken, an inspector of the ministry of health, said the house will be closed "until the present condition is no longer exhibited."

Mr. Galloway, who says he has developed lung cancer, said he is relieved to be moving his family. He lives in the house with his wife and one of their five children.

He said the ministry will pay for the expenses of moving and acquiring a new residence. He said he is looking for a house in the area.

Dr. Aitken said in an interview today that the radiation problem involves slag piles at an abandoned mine near the Galloway home. The mine was owned by a mining and smelting company.

Silver and cobalt were processed on the site from the 1800s to 1961 when the operation was closed, leaving tons of slag in the area.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Saturday that wastes from a nuclear-generating station at Port Hope had been deposited in fields in the Deloro area, about 25 miles north of Belleville.

Man Jumps From Ferry

Searchers are looking for the body of a man who jumped from the B.C. ferry Queen of Surrey on her run from Departure Bay to Horseshoe Bay Sunday evening.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said a witness who talked to the man shortly before he jumped described him as being a native Indian between 30 and 40 years of age, weighing 170 pounds and being 5'4" in height.

The spokesmen said the witness tried to throw a life-ring to the man and informed the magazine sales clerk.

By the time the captian was informed, however, the ship had docked. The incident happened about 7:50 p.m.

The coast guard cutters Racer and Mallard carried out an unsuccessful search for the body.

the weather

The present weather pattern will persist through Tuesday. This occasional rain will continue along the coast. Showers will accompany the Pacific disturbances as they cross the Interior.

Unknown.

Lancia has finally come to Canada. With a car that's bound to make it famous in no time: the Lancia Beta.

The Beta is a highly refined touring car. It's finished to a level you simply don't see on mass-produced vehicles. And in performance, it's nothing short of extraordinary.

But for all its enormous speed and exceptional handling, it doesn't demand much more from you than the car you now own.

The Beta comes in a Coupe and a 4-door Saloon. And both cost far less than you'd ever expect to pay for cars of this type.

Which means they certainly won't be unknown long.

Oil Shares Lead Toronto Higher

Volume by 2 p.m. was 804,000 shares, up from 779,000 at the same time Friday. Despite the upward trend, declining issues outnumbered advances 154 to 137 with 188 issues unchanged.

Dome Pete gained 1⅛ to $33¼, Dofasco A ¾ to $24, Mercantile Bank ⅝ to $17, Canadian Occidental Pete ⅛ to $9⅜ and Canadian International Power A ⅜ to $14⅞.

Losses among industrials included Home Oil A, down ⅜ to $26⅝, Bell Canada ¼ to $42¾, Cominco ⅛ to $32½ and Calgary Power A ⅛ to $26½.

Among mines, McIntyre rose ½ to $39, Falconbridge Copper ¼ to $6 and Cyprus Anvil ¼ to $9¼. United Keno Hill lost ¼ to $9¾ and Hudson Bay Mining A ¼ to $17¼.

Candel Oil was up ⅜ to $16 and Canadian Superior ¼ to $41. Numac dropped ½ to $9⅛ and Pan Ocean ¼ to $8½.

New York

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 2-to-1 margin in slow trading at New York.

The decline came despite the further spread of a cut in the prime lending rate to 7½ from 7¾ per cent in the banking industry.

Brokers said it appeared investors were simply unwilling to make purchases until they could get a clearer indication of how New York City's difficulties might eventually effect the United States' credit structure and the budding economic recovery.

Wall Street also appeared to have decided to sit back and await President Ford's press conference

Track: Muddy.

APPLE DOWDY took command at once, opened a long lead down the backstretch, but was fully extended to defeat THE ARYAN. The latter rallied from between rivals leaving the backstretch, loomed a threat in the upper stretch, but could not overtake APPLE DOWDY. SIS BOOM raced from just off the rail and gained ground in the stretch. TERRA VELOCE was through shortly after a half-mile. MUFF'S PICK was only prominent in the opening quarter. Start good, won driving.

Track: Muddy.

Winner: gr g, by Skymoud-Ana-Cha-Tay, by Grey Skies. Owner: E. Jolley. Trainer: I. D. Murdoch.

COUNTRY WINE set the pace from just off the rail and turned back FLEET MARCO under sfong urging. The latter saved ground, challenged for the lead from the inside of COUNTRY WINE leaving the backstretch, but could not overtake that one. ABLAKH raced without apparent mishaps. HERMINE'S PRINCE was wide on the first turn, and had nothing when called on for the real test. TAANAS PRIDE saved ground to no avail. MISTY ISLAND raced wide. LANGLEY'S IMP was excused by the stewards after unseating her rider and running off during the post parade and all wagers involving her were refunded. Start good, won driving.

1074 THIRD RACE — Claiming ($2000). Three-year-olds and upward which have not won two races in 1975. Purse $800. 6½ FURLONGS

Track: Muddy.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Winning Shot-Abaft, by Ab Jr. Owner: Mr. and Mrs. S. Conn. Trainer: E. W. Russell Jr.

WIN A SHOT raced to the outside, entered serious contention on the stretch turn and proved best in a hard drive. HARD CHOICE saved ground early, moved to the outside of SHELWOOD for the stretch run and just failed from between rivals. SHELWOOD set the pace from just off the rail, entered the lane with a slight advantage, but was not good enough. NEW PRIDE had speed, but could not keep up in the late stages. DR. G. G. MAC had no visible excuse. CARELESS CAT began to weaken leaving the stretch turn. Start good, won driving.

Track: Muddy.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Solarium II-My Girl Shirl, by Foremost. Owner: R. W. Henderson and S. Pang. Trainer: W. R. Olson.

SOLAR DRIVE began to advance shortly before completing a half-mile, challenged for the lead from the outside of FREEDOM CHARGER in the midstretch and prevailed in a hard drive. The latter, in tight early, went to the front from the outside of SHIPS VISITOR leaving the backstretch, and just failed to last. MR. HERCULES was wide on the first turn, but gained ground in the stretch from along the rail. SHIPS VISITOR and LANDSCAPE PAGE tired. LAWDY DOC was through early. Start good, won driving.

1076 FIFTH RACE—Claiming ($4000). Three-year-olds who have never won three races. Purse $1000. 6½ FURLONGS

Track: Muddy.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Poltux-Clem's Ex, by Clem. Owner: Raceland Stable. Trainer: D. Forster.

JOHNNY TWO DANCE saved ground, went to the front from the inside of COSTARULE midway on the stretch turn and won under steady urging. COSTARULE set the early pace from just off the rail, could not cope with JOHNNY TWO DANCE, but was easily the second best. KIMS SHADOW saved ground to no avail. TOUGH MAGIC had speed, was wide on the stretch turn and weakened through the stretch. LITE WHITENIN ducked out slightly at the start. JANDREW was outrun. Start good, won driving.

Track: Muddy.

Winner: dk b or br g, by Charmer II- Ashwood, by Arroz. Owner: C. Wuschke and K. Schmidt. Trainer: W. Isbister.

CHARMERS SYN, unhurried early, commenced his bid shortly before leaving the backstretch, gained the advantage from the outside of AIRDRIE BOB on the stretch turn and proved best in a hard drive. An objection lodged against the winner by the rider of AIRDRIE BOB alleging interference leaving the stretch turn, was not allowed. AIRDRIE BOB had speed throughout and just failed. BUM MONEY was without early speed. CRYSTAL COMET had early speed, was in tight on the second turn and could not keep up after seven furlongs. NOACCEPTION saved ground much of the way and had no apparent mishaps. TREASURE MILL raced wide early and was through after seven furlongs. SCOTTISH CRYSTAL showed little. CHIEF EXPORTER was through after six furlongs. Start good, won driving.

Winner: ch c, by Mr. Consistency-Nevada A. M., by Jet Pilot. Owner: R. J. Bennett. Trainer: R. G. Anderson.

AIR FLYER opened a wide early advantage, raced out from the rail, lost command to CHOYA leaving the backstretch, regained the lead leaving the stretch turn and drew clear under steady urging. SEA JAY, unhurried early, rallied from the outside around the stretch turn and outfinished CHOYA for the place. The latter had speed, gained the lead from the inside of AIR FLYER leaving the backstretch, but had little left when called on for the real test. GLENLYON MAC was never dangerous. BIG MIDGET had no apparent mishaps. CRAIGDINA had only a mild rally down the backstretch. Start good, won driving.

SAANICH SPREE set the pace under fine handling, and increased his advantage in the stretch under urging. AUSTIN TAYSHUSH saved ground, loomed a threat leaving the backstretch, but could not stay with the top one. PACIFIC RIM had speed, but gradually weakened. REGAL LEO was always outrun. VANCOUVER D and BEAU BUNNIE were through after six furlongs. Start good, won driving.

Grads Beat Bays

Dave Kirzinger, the 1974 most valuable player in the B.C. high school tournament, scored 22 points for the Grads while Larry Dalziel, an all-star last year, counted 20. Dave Richmond scored 14 points, Craig Higgins 11 and Steve Leung 10 for the Bays.

SOCCER VIKINGS EARN THEIR WAY INTO FINALS

If there was any doubt about UVic Vikings' right to be in the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union soccer championships this weekend at Centennial Stadium, they were dispelled Saturday in Edmonton.

Vikings won the Canada West title with a 4-0 shutout over Saskatchewan Huskies and will represent their conference in the five-team national finals.

UVic, which would have played in the tournament as the host team anyway, now must win only two matches for the Canadian crown. The Vikings play the Atlantic University Athletic Association champion in the first round Friday at 3:30 p.m. and if they win, they go directly to the final Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Friday's other opener pits Manitoba Bisons, Great Plans Conference champs, against the Ontario conference winner at 2 p.m. The winner of that one meets Concordia, a 5-1 winner over Laval in Montreal for the Quebec title, Saturday at 2:30 p.m. at Centennial for the other berth in Sunday's final, also at 2:30.

Vikings finished with a 3-0 won-lost record in the Canada West tournament while Alberta Golden Bears, 2-0 winners over UBC Thunderbirds, were second at 2-1. UBC was third at 1-2 followed by Saskatchewan, 0-3.

The title was the first event in CWUAA soccer for the Vikings, who got first-half goals from Danny Lomas and Brian Barraclough and another when a Saskatchtwan defender put the ball into his own net. Vic Escude scored 20 minutes into the second half before Vikings concentrated on defence to protect goalkeeper Mike Armstrong's shutout.

A Formful Day at Track

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

"Running to form" is a key phrase in the thoroughbred business. It just helps everyone fell better — the horsemen, the handicappers and, most of all, the wagering public.

And Saturday at Sandown that was the story, along with another record day at the mutuels, a record crowd and the best day in the life of an apprentice jockey.

Of the eight races, six were decided by less than a length, and five by the photo-finish camera. Four of the public betting picks got down in front and, in the other four races, the favorite ran second. Things like that don't usually happen at a race track and, of course, that made for long lines at the payoff wickets.

The crowd, an announced 5,262 — but there obviously were more than that — poured $289,667 through the mutuels, the most ever at a Victoria meeting; and in only eight races. By comparison, a week ago Saturday the handle was $276,009 for nine races. The 10-day total now is $1,678,215, far beyond the fondest expectations of the Capital City Turf Club, which is operating the meeting and already talking about next season.

The jockey who reached his personal zenith was apprentice Craig Miller. He rode four winners, three in succession. He started on Win A Shot, who got away at 7-1 and paid $16.60 in the third. He scored on Solar Drive for the longest price of the day, $23.60, in the fourth. He then came right back in the fifth on the favorite, Johnny Two Dance, for a three-quarter-length victory over Costarule which paid $4.80.

To wind up the day's proceedings Miller piloted homne Saanich Spree ($5.40) in the eighth.

Air Flyer won the Sandown Derby with an impressive performance, shrugging off a challenge from Choya in the late going and pulling away to win by three lengths, the biggest winning margin of the program.

The weather was reasonable enough during the day, but overnight rains again caused parking problems. Still the fans made out. The early birds got the choice parking spots, others parked on the roadway around the park and even others left their cars in Sidney and took taxis to the track. Race forms and programs were sold out early, the concessions were taxed to the limit, and mutuels manager Doug Mitten said the handle might have even been higher if one horse hadn't been a track scratch.

SOCCER PLAYOFFS TONIGHT

Reynolds Roadrunners, unbeaten and the team with the glossiest defensive record, and Spectrum, a squad with the dynamic attack, carry the favorite's roles.

But tonight's Greater Victoria High School Soccer League semi-final matches at Royal Athletic Park are sudden-death affairs, and that should be enough to instill championship hopes at Oak Bay and Mt. Douglas. Anything can happen in a one-game affair.

Reynolds faces Oak Bay at 6:30 and Spectrum plays Mt. Doug at 8:30. Winners of the sudden-death encounters advance to the district championship game, Friday at Royal Athletic Park.

'Best Game' Gives Oak Bay a Crown

SALMON ARM — Oak Bay came up with what coach Gill Hawkins described as "our best game of the tournament" to overwhelm Burnaby South 3-0 Saturday and win the B.C. high school girls' field hockey championship.

Tht victory capped a brilliant tournament for the champions, who swept through six games undefeated, scoring 21 goals and allowing none. The defence of goaltender Joan Merston and fullbacks Heather Docherty and Nancy Foster was the key to the six shutouts.

The championship ended a three-year quest by Oak Bay. Prior to this season, the team had won the Greater Victoria title twice and the Island crown once but fell short of expectations in the B.C. tournament.

Oak Bay wasted no time against Burnaby South, left-winger Sue Taylor scoring at six minutes. Joan Carruthers, leading scorer in the tournament with 10 goals, made it 2-0 by half time and Miss Taylor added the other goal in the second half.

Oak Bay reached the finals by beating Rutland 1-0 on Nancy Littley's goal. Burnaby South knocked off Salmon Arm 2-1 in the other semi-final.

Two other Victoria schools, Spectrum and Mt. Douglas, finished in the top 10 of the 16-team tournament. Spectrum finished fifth after beating Vancouver Tech 1-0 while Mount Doug was eighth after a 2-1 loss to Kelowna.

Prime Mushroom Time

By DON VIPOND

They have intriguing names like Shaggy Mane and Inky Cap, not to mention curious shapes and varied hues. Some are truly tasty and others will kill you quickly.

It's mushroom time in the rain again and in Greater Victoria, with close to 400 kinds of them, it's prime pickings.

But the man who for years helped pickers identify the edible ones, Dr. Adam Szczawinski, curator of botany at the Provincial Museum, has retired.

Mycology is the study of fungi, which range from microscopic size to 40-pound chunks, and Dr. Funk's regular work is with the micro-fungi which attack trees. Mushrooms are fungi.

Unfortunately, there is no rule of thumb for separating lethal from edible mushrooms, he says. Example: poisonous mushrooms all have white gills, but so do some of the edible ones.

Shaggy Manes and Inky Caps are among the edible group, along with puffballs and sulfur fungi, also known as Chicken of the Woods. But again there are exceptions. Some people get violently ill if they eat Inky Caps before or after taking liquor.

Deadliest of the mushrooms are those in the Amanita group and while some are quite distinctive, the old adage that any mushrooms which peel can be eaten simply isn't true. Some Amanitas peel quite readily, Funk notes.

Again, most Amanitas have warts — but not all.

Best way to learn the safe ones is to be introduced to them by someone who knows what he's talking about. There are a couple of highly qualified amateurs around, he said.

The mushrooms you buy in the store are generally a domesticated form of the common meadow mushroom.

Funk says growing mushrooms in a home garden requires quite stringent conditions in which a compost of well-fermented horse manure is used, for the most part.

"I've never tried it myself and I only know of failures."

If there is a single rule to mushroom picking, he suggests that it's "when in doubt — don't eat it."

Those in doubt can bring the mushrooms puzzling them to his office at the centre "and we'll be glad to check them out."

But does the mushroom man like mushrooms as food?

"I try at least one or two species a week on myself and family," he said, "and I know what I'm doing."

A Place to Get Better: One View of Hospitals

Hospital rooms should be panelled in knotty pine with picture windows that look to the outside world. There should be bright prints upon the walls, a cheery fireplace ablaze in one corner. There should be a buzzer beside the patient's bed to summon room service and a menu including Lobster Thermidore. There should be . . .

What's that, you say? Oh, I know that the crying need for the day is more hospital beds, that there's hardly a hospital in our part of the world that hasn't had to use its corridors because the rooms are full. I know that there are long waiting lists for minor operations because there's no place to put the patient.

But yesterday I found myself looking beyond the immediate future and my hope is that the healers may be thinking along the same lines. I see no reason why we shouldn't dream of hospital rooms that will give humanity a fighting chance for survival instead of challenging them to get out alive.

A nurse was coming out of the room where my father-in-law, Ralph, has been a patient. Ralph is 89 years of age and in remarkable shape for his vintage. It is, in fact, the first time he has been hospitalized in his long life and his doctor assures me he'll be out in a few days. The nurse affirmed this optimistic diagnosis when I asked her how he was coming along.

"He shows every sign of complete recovery," she grinned. "He's complaining about everything."

A mere glance was enough to confirm this happy verdict since Ralph was clearly his old irascible self and when I told him what the nurse had said he obviously considered it a compliment.

"She's a fine girl," he said, "but she knows I will be delighted to leave. The trouble with hospitals is that you could put a well man in this bed and he'd instantly feel sick. Everything — but everything! — is a reminder that you're ill. Why, the very echoes of the place, the whole cockeyed routine seem contrived to murder your morale. The very smell of the place is an invitation to hypochandria."

Maybe so, I said, but it was clear that hospital had done him a whole lot of good. I hadn't seen him looking so rested in a long time.

"Rested? Are you kidding?" Ralph countered. "Why, I haven't had this sort of routine since the British Army. They awaken you at the crack of dawn for breakfast. They wait out in the hall until you're just about to sneak a nap. Then they dart in and stick a thermometer in your mouth. Then they go out and you try to sleep again. Just when you think there's a chance they dart in again and rip all the bed clothes from under you." He looked at me furtively. "I wonder how many people die in hospitals from enforced insomnia. And the meals!"

"Not good?"

"Wholesome — oh, very wholesome," Ralph said bitterly. "But any fool knows that a man wants something a little special when he's sick. Ask any mother. Ask your wife. But here — why, it's still before noon when they bring you a great heaping plate of roast beef and mashed potatoes and — God help us! — gravy!"

So what, I asked Ralph, would be his idea of a hospital, presuming, of course, that there were none of the shortages of space and staff.

"First of all," said Ralph, "rooms that would be pleasant and cheerful to live in. A patient who's going to spend more than 24 hours on his back should have a big, deep, comfortable double bed instead of this patented padded slab. And if he wants to sleep he should sleep and not have one eye on the door waiting for those oh-so punctual visits.

"He should be pampered in his appetite. Why not? You aren't sick every day in your life. Why, there's one old guy down the hall here, practically on his last legs. He just looks at those mashed potatoes and that gravy and turns away. That's nourishment? What that fellow needs is the choice of a first-class menu. As it is, he's perishing from malnutrition."

"Still," I pointed out, "as I said, you never looked better."

"I shouldn't kick," Ralph agreed grudgingly. "They do a marvellous job when you consider their problems. The nurses, particularly, are wonderful. But, mark my words, there's going to come a day when the medicine men will realize that they need a whole new concept of treating the sick and particularly in the long siege of convalescence. I'm feeling just ornery enough to do a little pioneering."

"Well," I said, "I hear you'll be coming home in a day or two."

The nurse had come back to the room, bearing a thermometer. Ralph took it without complaining. He favored the nurse with a conspiritat wink.

"I just hope I don't miss it," he said as I made my exit.

Calvert Crescent Closure Expected

It is also expected that neighbors living close to the park will object to the closure.

On Saturday morning, Mayor Brian Smith gave more than 30 residents a tour of the area, accompanied by municipal engineer Geoffrey White.

Last spring, Dr. E. H. W. Elkington donated four lots to bring the park at Island Road in south Oak Bay to six acres.

The residents signed a petition, thanking Elkington for his gesture to help obtain the park, purchased with the aid of a $110,000 provincial grant.

Council announced Oct. 9 that the road allowance will be part of .28 acres Elkinton will receive as a land swap for the four lots he's donated.

Residents are concerned that an alternate route will deprive some nearby houses of privacy.

YOUTH GUILTY OF BREAK-IN

A 17-year-old Victoria youth will be held in custody for sentence Nov. 14 following a plea of guilty to break-in, attempted break-in and possession of housebreaking instruments.

Police found the instruments, including glass-cuttter, hammer and tape, when checking his residence regarding an Oct. 14 theft at the same store when watches, a lighter and other items had been stolen.

Police arrested him early this morning while he was cutting window glass at the rear of the store.

He was ordered held in custody when Judge William Ostler said: "He may be only 17, but he's shown a considerable degree of sophistication."

Bruce's defence counsel Richard Anthony told Ostler the youth likely got his ideas from television.

Some Won't Quit

Some businesses, it seems, just never know when to quit.

While bankrupty proceedings and possible fraud investigations continue in B.C. in connection with the Quit Centre for the Control of Smoking, which closed suddenly 10 weeks ago, an operation under the same name is attempting to open for business in Winnipeg.

Bill Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau, said he received the informatin last week in a telephone call from Winnipeg radio station CJOB.

Tindall said the station had been approached by an advertising agency to handle ads for a Quit Cenre opening in the city, but someone at the station had received an anonymous telephone call suggesting they check the status of B.C. operations under that name.

At first, Tindall admitted, he was unsure whether "it was the same outfit" as the one which had left money owing to about 400 Vancouver Island residents who had prepaid for service, as well as back salary owing to staff members here.

But such doubts were dispelled because the advertising agency had included in its kit sent to the radio station clipping from B.C. newspapers, "showing how successful their operations had been in B.C." Among the cities mentioned in the cuttings was Duncan.

'Unfit' Label For Pet Food

All frozen pet food sold in the province will have to be labelled "not fit for human consumption."

A cabinet order made public today also stipulates that no meat sold for pet food should contain bacteria capable of causing diseases in humans.

Provincial epidemiologist A. A. Larsen in Victoria today explained the government has no statistical evidence of pensioners and others eating pet food but has had some unofficial reports indicating this happening in some parts of the province.

Canned pet food should be safe for human consumption, he said, because it has been heat treated but there could be some danger in frozen pet meat.

Mrs. Cynthia Stringfellow, counsellor for Victoria's 5,000-member Silver Threads, said today she hasn't heard of any pensioners buying frozen pet food for consumption.

"I'm sure it's done over the province but I haven't heard of it among our members," said Mrs. Stringfellow. "This is not to say they haven't done so."

Another spokesman for the Victoria welfare office of the Human Resources department also said there were no formal reports of humans eating pet food but added:

"I suspect it's one of those things we know about but don't acknowledge."

Stores which prepare their own frozen pet food from meat scraps should be safe, said Larsen, because the meat scraps are from government-inspected products.

But other frozen pet meat is obtained from what is known in the trade as "dealers, diers and downers" — animals who have died or are on the point of death.

Larsen cited a case in B.C. where a girl contracted a serious illness which was difficult to diagnose until it was discovered her pets had the same illness.

Organisms causing the illness were discovered in the pet food which was made from dead hens.

So Larsen said besides warning people not to eat the frozen food cabinet decided to ensure food itself is not carrying organisms which can cause disease, since those diseases could be passed from animals to humans.

B.C. hopes the federal government will take some action in the area of pet food control and Larsen said discussions have been held on the matter.

If frozen pet food were heat treated in the same way canned pet food, it should be safe, said Larsen.

"It could still be terrible garbage but it wouldn't make people sick," he said.

George Phillion, assistant regional director of the department said he would be concerned to hear of instances — assistance cases or not — where pet food was being used to balance nutrition.

"We have the Meals on Wheels program to rely on in cases where someone is unable to cook . . . and we are mutually interested in expanding this service further to areas where a poper diet is lacking," said Phillion.

Public Decides On Milk Pouch

Appearance of milk-in-a-pouch on Victoria store shelves will depend upon public acceptance of the innovation which one dairy began offering in home deliveries recently.

Silverwood Dairies manager Ivor Fuller said quart-size plastic pouches have not yet been offered to all home delivery customers and will not be introduced in stores until they want it, based on buyer demand.

"This is here if you like it," we'll say, and leave it to them if they want to try it," Fuller said.

The idea of milk in a bag is about 10 years old in eastern Canda and has been accepted in some western cities, Edmonton for one.

Fuller said there are some production advantages and definite customer advantages, for example easy refrigerator storage where pouches can be "stacked like cordwood" on narrow shelves. He said milk can be frozen in the bag for lengthier storage if desired.

Householders are offered a re-usable plastic jug into which the pouch fits for pouring once the corner has been snipped off.

The empty pouch itself is easier to dispose of than a cardboard carton and requires no washing as do returnable plastic milk bottles. Pouches can be burned with waste paper or washed to use for freezer bags.

Until there is wide distribution of bagged milk there is no cost advantage to dairies, Fuller indicated.

Coast Guard Plans Beacons At Shawnigan

The Canadian coast guard intends to place navigation beacons on Shawnigan Lake and also install lighted navigation beacons on Shawnigan Lake and also install lighted navigation aids in the popular cruising waters of Desolation Sound.

Larry Slaght, district marine manager in Victoria, made the announcement at the annual awards dinner of the Vancouver Island division of the Navy League of Cnada, held at the Travelodge in Nanaimo Saturday evening.

Slaght told the 150 at the dinner that the Shawnigan Lake beacons will be installed in 1976 and the Desolation Sound aids will go into effect in 1976-1977.

He said an increasing number of Royal Canadian Sea Cadets are choosing the Canadian coast guard as a career.

National Navy League president Jack Koyl of Victoria reported that on a visit to the coast guard's officer training college in Sydney, N.S. he had found 37 per cent of the students were former sea cadets.

"There are also two ex-Navy League Wrenettes at the college," Koyl said, "One is training to be a deck officer and the other, an engineer."

Division president Gerry Boshop of Victoria announced that the provincial government's B.C. Steamship Co. has employed sea cadets aboard the Princess Marguerite for two week period during the summer season.

Sea cadets will be carried aboard the Princess Marguerite in 1976 and arrangements are being made to have them on the government's newest ferry, the Prince Henry.

CPO Donald Warren of Saanich's Admiral Budge corps was awarded the trophy for the best sea cadet in B.C. and a watch from the Strathcona Trust, which also donated $100 to the corps for training equipment.

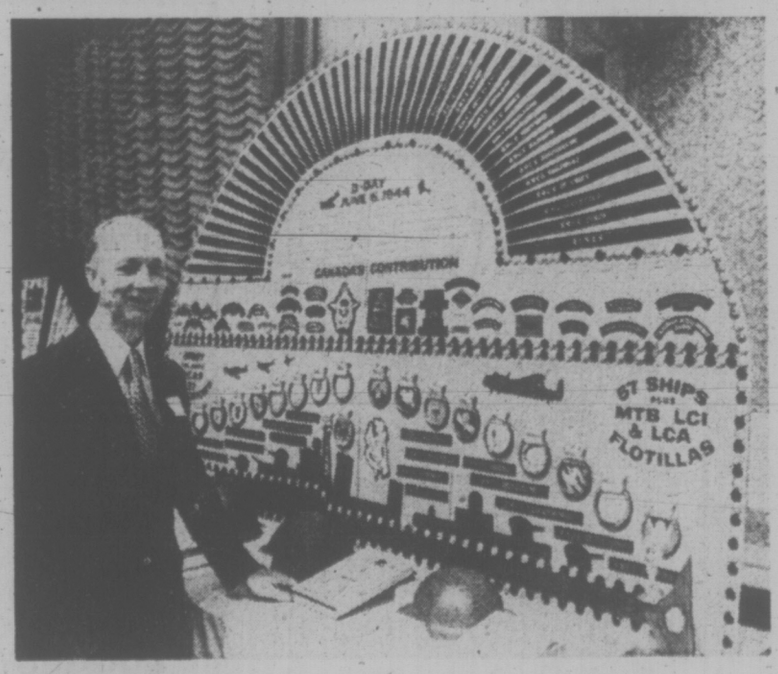
The Thorton Memorial Trophy for the corps providing the best program of sailing, survival and other outdoor activities went to the Fort Augusta corps of Comox.

The general proficiency award for wrenette corps was won by the Denis W. Brown corps of Campbell River while the award for best Navy League cadet corps went to Victoria's Admiral Rayner corps. Port Alberni's E. L. Hammer corps was presented with the trophy for most improved Navy League cadet corps.

Former Nanaimo sea cadet George Horel was presented with a Navy League scholarship. Horel is studying engineering at the University of British Columbia.

Mrs. Della Foy of Port Alberni received an honor certificate and testimonials were presented to Lieut. Alfred Ball of Port Hardy; Lieut. Leon Landry, Sub.-Lt. Gerald Hayden and Lieut. Bernard McNicholl, all of Nanaimo; and Stan Gibbs and Mel Skinner of Victoria.

AT LEAST 1,000 visitors attended the 11th annual historical and antique arms show of the Vancouver Island Arms Collectors Association, held at the Empress Hotel on Saturday and Sunday. Wilf Falconer is seen here with his display of crests and insignias of Canadian troops involved in D-Day on June 6, 1944. The display won more awards than any other in the show, including best in show award and award for best collection of Canadiana.



Vic West Mayoralty Forum Set

Victoria's mayoralty and aldermanic candidates have been invited to address a public meeting Wednesday at the Victoria West elementary school.

Arranged by the Victoria West Community Association, the meeting was originally scheduled to discuss only the Neighborhood Improvement Program proposals for Vic West. But its scope was broadened to allow candidates to air their policies and answer questions.

Most controversial topic likely to surface is the proposed Vic West community centre to be built with NIP fun

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

Co-op Living Home Sought for Handicapped

The human resources department is expected to rule this month on a grant application from a local group to establish a "co-operative living home" for four handicapped people now confined to hospital.

The group, about 25 people who are either handicapped or interested in helping the handicapped, is forming a non-profit society, said Sachi Tamura, one of its members. They have been conducting workshops since June.

If the grant is approved, it will be used to renovate, furnish and subsidize the rent for a home where the four now in hospital will live.

Another supporter, Donna Pistill, said the four are now in institutions where they "exist" with many elderly patients.

"The right to decide their own life style is denied them now, with the result that institutionalization has nearly destroyed all initiative in them."

In a "co-operative living home," they would have the right and responsibility of making all the decisions concerning the running of their own household.

Tamaura said that in such a home the four, all in wheelchairs, would contribute part of their income toward the rent.

Three of the four proposed for the first home are in their twenties and one in her forties. Two are men and two women.

There are five co-operative living homes operating on the Lower Mainland and many others in Great Britain, Pistill said.
